Old Hatton House memories

CARMEL HIGHLANDS photographer Al Weber has collected a bundle of historic and lasting images of local personalities and landmarks, such as the old Hatton House (above) which once stood at the mouth of Carmel Valley opposite The Barnyard. This photo by Weber was taken in 1964. For a wide-ranging look at this photographer and his work, see pages 23, 28 and 29 in the arts and leisure section of this week's issue.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. While there is no limit on length, brevity is encouraged. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address and signature. A phone number is needed for verification only. Anonymous letters are not accepted.

Defeat the recall

Dear Editor:

I would like to make some remarks in support of the Carmel school board. I believe that most of the public dialogue has lost sight of the general issue, so I'll begin with a sketch of how we got to where we are.

A half-dozen or so years ago school boards throughout the state faced the problem of having to operate under sharply restructured funding rules. This affected some, especially Carmel, more than others. But that is ancient history.

The response necessarily was to make cuts, and it is useful to review the major areas where resource commitments could be reduced:

- Cut programs
- Increase class size
- Make supplies last longer (books, etc.)
- Defer maintenance

It was not a question of whether we do these things. It was only a question of allocating the magnitude of the resource cuts over the areas.

The effect was predictable — lower quality of education. This, of course, induces parents to seek alternative schools for their children. This they did and enrollment declined. Declining enrollment means less ADA money from the state and this in turn creates the need for further cutting of programs, maintenance, supplies, etc. Thus we are caught in a downward spiral — more cuts beget less enrollment which begets more cuts, etc.

During this period, school boards throughout the state developed a mentality of "hanging on for one more year." Moreover, this took place in a period of severe economic inflation, and we got into the habit of placing people before programs, class size, maintenance, and supplies. In effect, we have been "eating our own seed."

Perhaps one of the more visible signs of this was the deterioration of facilities due to the prolonged deferment of maintenance. It has been necessary to sell school property in order to treat this problem. The use of proceeds from sale of school property cannot, by law, be used directly for salaries. This well, too, is going to run dry. There is not much property left to sell. There is wisdom in keeping some of it.

The new school board has taken measures to turn these trends around. The key is increasing enrollment. The past year has seen more progress than in four or more of the preceding. The program at the middle school is sharply improved, and the enrollment at that same school is sharply up. That's all we really need to know. Concurrently, inflation is sharply down.

This school board has the right idea. They need our support. I urge the community to defeat the recall effort.

Trustees should resign

Dear Editor:

I am very appreciative of the letter of Mr. Ed Lee (Pine Cone/Outlook, Feb. 7). Lee so eloquently expresses his support for the Carmel District schools and his outrage at the behavior of three members of the present Board of Education: Robert Fenton, James Yates, and Susan Bromfield. In his letter, he goes to the heart of the matter when he describes the stress felt by staff and community, induced by the activities and the attitudes of these three.

His letter expresses so well what many of us feel: dismay at the injustice to Superintendent Bill Rand, at the poor management of district money (the priority of establishing the seventh period day at Carmel Middle School instead of an adequate cost of living raise for the staff); and at the abrasive and insulting manner in which intelligent and concerned community members have been treated at board meetings by former Board President Robert Fenton.

For me, the most upsetting aspect of all is that the three board members have achieved their pre-determined goals in the face of overwhelming criticism of their actions and attitudes. Nothing seems to faze them in their belief in their own omnipotence. No criticism, no matter how valid, is accepted by them.

Further, they have taken credit for success in programs and goals achieved by administrators and teachers — goals which were established before they were ever on the board. For example: the renovation of Carmel High School was initiated by a former board, at least a year and a half before the present board took their seats. The Peer School Excellence Program was brought to the board for approval by Bill Rand. The strict attendance policy at the high school was initiated by administrators Marsh Kading-Kelly and Joe Feldeisen. These programs have been faithfully carried out by the staff.

In my opinion, the motives of Fenton, Yates, and Bromfield have been less than honest and straightforward. Certainly their reasons for ousting Rand, so belatedly given, smack of being "trumped up" rather than specific. They were reluctant to name specific complaints against Rand, choosing instead to allude to perceived unsatisfactory behavior by him to which "we would object if only we knew," a tactic which seemed devious and even cowardly to me.

The seemingly overwhelming need of the three board members for rigid control of our district seems inappropriate. In the opinion of many, they have far exceeded their authority. They have violated the law with their secret meetings, which they first denied (in public) and later admitted. The damage they have inflicted on the morale of our staff and students is immeasurable.

Peter Salmonsens, treasurer of a group supporting the three board members, recently sent a letter to district voters inviting them, if they signed a recall petition, to withdraw their names by writing to the registrar of voters. He cited the expense to the district of the recall election.

However, Salmonsens did not mention the cost of the procedure to search for a new superintendent — a search made necessary by the actions of Yates, Fenton, and Bromfield. The three should resign and save the district the cost of the recall election.

Heroes' names fading

Dear Editor:

On New Year's Day I went to Devendorf Park with a picnic lunch to look at the stone commemorating those who died in World War II. My brother's name is there — First Lt. William G. Sharpe, along with his close friends Fred McIndoe and Douglas "Bud" Carter.

There are 21 names altogether and not one among them was unknown to me, including my classmate, Gordon Bain, who died in the R.A.F.

To my shock and distress, I found that the names are fading! It was hard to make some of them out. Time and the weather have conspired to subtly eradicate the precise incisions, and it will not be long before all the names of those Carmel heroes who lost their lives in World War II will be indecipherable.

I phoned the city hall about it, but received no return call.

Something must be done and at once.

Costs shouldn't determine outcome of recall

THE SOMNOLENT recall campaign in the Carmel Unified School District was roused from its lethargy last week when concerns were raised about the effects of the $25,000 special election on the already-shaky finances of the district.

Trustee Patricia Condren, who is not one of the three trustees targeted for recall, said the school board should study the impact such a vote would have on the district budget. Others have suggested that the three trustees who are objects of the recall election should resign to spare the district the additional expense and trauma.

Proponents of the election have aimed their sights at trustees Robert Fenton, Susan Bromfield and James Yates and have until Feb. 28 to collect signatures of 3,463 registered voters in the district to qualify the recall measure for the ballot.

If the recall measure qualifies for the ballot, voters will be asked whether each of the three trustees should be recalled, and will vote on replacement candidates.

Politics of the recall effort aside, the argument that trustees should resign because of the costs of the election seems specious.

There is nothing that trustees can do to prevent a recall election, if backers collect the requisite number of signatures. Circulators of the petitions are only exercising their democratic right to petition their government.

Now that the recall process has started, it would not make any sense for the three trustees to resign simply to save the district the costs of an election. If there is any hindsight-is-better-than-foresight involved in this situation, it should be applied more to trustees than to recall proponents.

With the charges and counter-charges that have been hurled back and forth in this campaign, the best way to air the issues and to heal the wounds is to permit voters to express themselves. Anything less than that would be a disservice to the public.

Exploiting food crisis

Dear Editor:

A terrible civil war rages in Ethiopia. Our own U.N. Ambassador, Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick, revealed in 1981 that "in February, 1978, the Ethiopian police and army squads murdered some 5,000 grade school, high school and university students, and imprisoned some 30,000 others — 12-year-old children were among those immersed in hot oil, sexually tortured, or flung out of windows and left to die in the streets."

The millions of dollars in aid that the free world is presently sending to Ethiopia will help determine the outcome of that war.

More than one authority agrees with a recent Heritage Foundation report that tells us that the Ethiopian communist dictator, Lieutenant Colonel Mengistu Haile Mariam, is exploiting the food crisis in order to starve to death his political opposition.

An Oxford University writer, Keith Griffin, writes that the Ethiopian communist regime spends nearly half of its gross national product on Soviet weaponry.

Another British writer, Martin Meredith, in his newly published book, First Dance of Freedom, charges that the communist regime of Colonel Mengistu had plenty of time and resources to prepare contingency plans against this famine.

Instead Colonel Mengistu bought Russian arms.

Still another report tells us that the communist dictator spent an estimated $150 to $250 million a few months ago celebrating the 10th anniversary of the communist revolution in Ethiopia.

For that celebration, that communist regime reportedly bought a whole shipload of Scotch whiskey.

You can bet that those starving children were not celebrating.

Secrecy attempt 'childish'

Dear Editor:

The totally childish pretense at cloak-and-dagger secrecy surrounding our latest space launch is disgusting and embarrassing. Most adults outgrow those kid games long before they become old enough to be senators like Jake Garn, or congressmen like Jack Kemp, or presidents like Ronald Reagan.

If the mission was intended to frighten the Soviets into begging for forgiveness at a bargaining table, it has a lot going for it, not just because it is the first step in placing hundreds of nuclear bombs in orbit around our planet, but because it demonstrates the infantile, unstable and irresponsible thinking of our leadership.

NASA is not a military agency. I don't want my tax money even helping to pay for the fuel for setting this $300-million spy satellite out in space where its major effect will be to bring us closer to a nuclear holocaust.

Most of all, I resent it because it is so totally stupid in every respect, and is a display of arrogance and disregard for human life that hasn't been seen since Hitler started across Europe.

Hidden Valley excels

Dear Editor:

Peter Meckel, Hidden Valley Music Seminars founder and director, has done it again — provided us with three "don't miss them" productions!

All three are superbly acted. The Barber of Seville has a well-chosen cast of fine voices supported by a perfect orchestra, ingenious comic touches, costumes and set.

No matter how many times you've read or seen Of Mice and Men, this one can still thrill you by the way it builds up tension and excitement.

The new opera based on Of Mice and Men adds even more interest in the way the music carries out the plot.

Thank you Peter, stage directors Fred Weiss and Robert Darling, music director

Carmel antique shops become target of city war against tourist businesses

By MICHAEL GARDNER

FIRST it was T-shirt shops. Then it was art galleries, restaurants and jewelry stores. Now the latest battleground in the city jihad against tourist-oriented business in Carmel has become antique stores.

The Carmel Planning Commission, besieged by an increasing number of applications to open antique stores, has sent a message to the city council: "Help!"

Currently, antique stores are allowed to open in town under the use permit process. The planning commission, when it issues the use permit, establishes certain restrictions on the business.

But in the past commissioners have allowed antique stores to pretty much open as they please. That is at least until their Jan. 23 session.

Commissioners rejected an application by Jutta Reese to open an antique store on the south side of Sixth Avenue between Lincoln and Dolores streets.

The commission cited what is known as general plan policy "P-1-4," which allows permit denials if the action would pose a threat to the "health, welfare and safety" of the citizenry.

"We have a plethora of antique stores," Councilman Robert Stephenson said. "I don't really think they serve a local purpose as much as a hardware store or grocery store."

Commissioners determined that an overflow number of antique stores pose such a threat. Planning intern John Mandeville estimates that there are 28 antique stores in town.

"On a per capita basis Carmel supports more than 10 times the number of antique businesses than the county average and about 10 times the number of shops in the adjacent peninsula cities," according to his report.

Mandeville suggests that if the city would be consistent with the peninsula average "Carmel would support only three or six shops."

Planning Commission Chairwoman Sandy Swain said: "We're almost in the same box we've been in with art galleries. There are three more on the back burner."

Ms. Swain said she hopes the council will address the issue at an upcoming session, but so far there has been no formal announcement of when that discussion will be.

The council has invoked P-1-4 in its rules that govern such businesses as jewelry stores, art galleries and restaurants.

Commissioners want to know whether antique stores should be judged by similar criteria.

THE COUNCIL has a general policy to prohibit new jewelry stores and art galleries unless the operator is taking ownership of an existing similar business.

The loophole to this policy is that the council will allow such new businesses if "different" from existing stores.

For example, the council has allowed a new jewelry store where the items are created on site and repairs also are made.

The council reasons that this type of business also is service-oriented and would be used by locals.

Another example of this exception is when an art gallery sells different kinds of art. Such was the case with Bennett Sculpture, which was permitted to open in Cottage Row.

The council ruled that there are few sculpture galleries in town so the Bennetts could have their gallery as long as it deals in bronze sculpture.

An art dealer who wants city permission to move to another location must obtain his landlord's guarantee that another gallery will not take his place. If the landlord refuses, the relocation automatically is denied.

The issue of new restaurants has become moot with the enactment of a water conservation ordinance that prohibits new businesses if that use consumes more water than the previous business.

Since restaurants are among the highest commercial water users, it is doubtful that a new eating establishment can open in Carmel. However, existing restaurants still can change ownerships.

But the question posed to the council is how to control the proliferation of antique stores in Carmel. How can one antique store be different from the other?

Council members contacted by the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook said the question of whether to enact stricter policies on antique stores definitely is one that must be at least discussed.

"We have a plethora of antique stores," Councilman Robert Stephenson said. "I don't really think they serve a local purpose as much as a hardware store or grocery store."

"I suppose I would be sympathetic to some sort of control on them," he said. "I can't imagine all our citizens going to antique stores. I think we've got enough — probably too many."

Mayor Charlotte Townsend said if the planning commission is concerned, the council should be too.

"I would have to study the situation. If the planning commission is concerned I'm concerned too because they do their homework," the mayor said.

"We must uphold as much as we can the intent of the general plan," Mayor Townsend added.

Councilman David Maradei suggested that a proliferation of any business will "throw the town out of balance."

"We want to keep Carmel in balance. We don't want too many of one type of business," he said. "We don't know for certain whether antique shops will hurt or not hurt Carmel. That's something we'll have to talk about."

Councilwoman Helen Arnold was recuperating from surgery and not contacted. Councilman James Wright refused to comment on city business except during public council meetings.

"I suppose I would be sympathetic to some sort of control on them. I can't imagine all our citizens going to antique stores. I think we've got enough — probably too many."

Beach repair plans to be unveiled at Feb. 14 Sunset Center meeting

WHAT NEW look will Carmel Beach sport at this time next year?

Residents will have an opportunity to get a sneak preview of the designer's plans when the Carmel Beach Rehabilitation Task Force meets at 2 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 14 in the Bingham Room inside the Sunset Center complex.

Consultant Robert Royston of the Mill Valley firm of Royston, Hanimoto, Alley and Abbey will unveil his preliminary design plans for scrutiny by the task force.

Royston then will incorporate suggested modifications into a final design and accompanying draft environmental report for the project.

The design and EIR also will be subjects of public hearings during future planning commission and city council sessions.

The $850,000 project envisions a walkway, changes to Scenic Road parking and traffic circulation, new access stairs, beach bluff landscaping and a new fence that will protect the banks from beachgoers who want to take shortcuts down the slopes.

Supervisors designate CV land as open space

ANOTHER 2,223 acres in Carmel Valley has been designated as permanent agricultural land by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Supervisors at their Feb. 5 session approved an application to annex five parcels to the Bloomquist Ranch, north side of Carmel Valley Road about 10 miles east of the Village.

The ranch already is protected as an agricultural preserve. The annexation now brings total acreage to 4,535.

The application was made under the authority of the Williamson Act, a state program designed to keep agricultural land in operation.

The Williamson Act affords reduced property taxes for farmers and ranchers who dedicate their property as agricultural preserves. The state reimburses the county about half of the lost property tax income.

Kafton to discuss trees

DAVID KAFTON, executive director of the National Council on Gene Resources, will address the Monterey Bay Chapter of the California Native Plant Society at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 19 at the Carmel High School library.

Kafton will speak on "Conservation of Endangered Monterey Cypress and Monterey Pine." He recently discussed the same topic with the Carmel Forestry Commission to seek city support for his $80,000 statewide program to save these native species.

The public is invited.

Carmel Youth Center to seat a new board; feuding quiets down

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A NEW Carmel Youth Center Board of Directors to be seated March 20 promises to end the more than three-year-old internal feud that has paralyzed the center.

And the future turned even brighter this month when the former board joined in a rare display of unity Feb. 6 to hire a new co-director, Carole Colter. The board also decided to spend $900 for a jukebox to replace a damaged stereo that for months has sat useless in a repair shop.

Colter, who will be in charge of programs and budgets, already has established a parent

Colter, who will be in charge of programs and budgets, already has established a parent guidance committee and revitalized the dormant youth board of directors. (See related story this issue.)

The hiring of Colter is a turning point for the Youth Center.

The center has been inactive for years as former Supervisor Jack Giles began thinking in terms of retirement.

In the late 1960s and throughout the next decade, the Youth Center simply was seldom used by local youths. Giles and his supporters said it was a sign of the times.

But some of the more vocal parents said their children stopped going to the center because there was nothing to do there.

They also charged that the center served a small clique of a dozen or so youths. "Outsiders," parents said, were made uncomfortable.

The battle reached a crescendo six months ago when Phil Cherry was hired to replace the retiring Giles.

Cherry is highly regarded by almost all of the parents and board members — but only for his mechanical skills and ability to maintain the facility.

He sorely lacked expertise in programming, they said.

An informal committee of parents and board members met quietly for several weeks and came up with a plan. They knew Cherry's value as a facility supervisor and wanted to keep him in that role.

They also knew the old guard majority would never replace Cherry.

To accomplish their goals, the committee developed a compromise — co-directors. It worked.

And the same night the board hired Colter, directors bought the jukebox. Three days later, Cherry had it moved in and the juke box was playing Prince, Def Leppard and David Bowie to a crowd of about 50 Carmel High School students dancing in the center auditorium Saturday night.

A jukebox may not seem like a lot to many people, but for the parents frustrated for three years by board bickering and no action, it was a blessing.

OF THE 18 new directors who start their terms March 20, only half a dozen are leftovers from the past board.

Those who did not seek re-nomination, or resigned before the January election, are: Jim Kalber, Sr., Bob and Ginnie Updike, Jim Kelsey, Mike Meheen and Gail Salmonsens.

Meheen, the secretary to the board, and

Salmonsens continually battled Kalber, the Updikes and current Treasurer Pete Tersol over programs and by-laws.

In January the board elected six new "at large" members. They are: Lou Langley, Steve Taylor, Jim Kalber Jr. Tim Connell, Jerry Byrne and Jay Miller.

Also, board by-laws require board representation from the many service clubs in the area, such as Kiwanis and Rotary clubs.

The new service club representatives are: Tersol, Paul Artellan, Merv Sutton, Rosa Belle Dresser, Ellie Lester, Bob Connell, John Whitaker, Nick Nicholason and Dee Cotten.

Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend remains as an ex-officio, or non-voting, member of the board.

Two empty board seats are to be filled by directors March 20. One spot is to be filled by a new vote on whether Ron Faia or Richard Nunez should serve on the board. The pair tied at the January elections.

The representative from the Carmel Kiwanis club still has not been appointed.

The election brought an end to the majority enjoyed by the "old guard."

The old guard — represented by the Updikes, Kelsey, Kalbers and Tersol — was the object of many complaints from parents frustrated by the bickering and few programs offered.

Mrs. Updike, who ran the annual rummage sale that raised money for the Youth Center, also set aside differences at the last meeting.

She donated $541 of her own money raised from a garage sale, separate from the annual events she sponsored to help the Youth Center.

The newer members — joined by veterans Meheen and Sutton — were angry about the lack of activities for the kids and what they felt was a misguided appropriation of finances.

It was been pointed out that Tersol had been paid about $4,000 to keep track of center finances. His fee was more than the center spent on youth programs for the entire year.

Now it appears that the newer members will control the board votes. And since new officers are to be elected in March, it is doubtful that Tersol will be returned as treasurer.

Taylor, Cotten and Langley — have reputations for getting things done where children are involved.

Taylor, a Carmel River School teacher, put together the city summer recreation program and winter activities in just a couple of weeks.

Cotten, who moved to Carmel last summer, is active in We Care, a community organization dedicated to reducing drug and alcohol abuse among teenagers through alternative activities and awareness.

Langley, whose husband Jim also is active in the schools, has been a longtime volunteer in the school district. She's served on numerous committees and is known for her buoyancy.

Members who will take office in March say they are dedicated to turning the Youth Center around by drawing the students back with many organized activities.

And Colter is the key to that turnaround, the directors say.

"I think we'll get along just fine," said Kalber Jr., an at large member. "I think she'll do a good job. It's going to help the kids and that's what we're here for."

The in-fighting already has stopped, Sutton said.

"I always thought we could work together, but it started out antagonistic and it just got worse," Sutton said of the old board.

"Now we're on the right track. We haven't had a knock-down-drag-out fight for two months," said Sutton, who represents the Carmel Rotary Club.

"I think it's going to be terrific. We'll build it back up."

Sutton has nothing but praise for Colter.

"I'm thrilled that we hired Carole. I just anticipate great things for the Youth Center. She's just a dynamo."

Ellie Lester, the Carmel Business Association representative, said she's ready to work together with the new board.

"We've got to be able to work together for the good of the children. I'm optimistic about it. Most of us haven't been there very long so we're starting out together," Lester said.

Cotten, who represents We Care, said she's not interested in looking back at past problems.

"I'm going to start fresh. It's going to take a lot of effort from the new board and new co-directors," she said.

Cotten said the hiring of Colter is a "start" but that the center will need "a lot of parent involvement" to be successful.

FORMER MEMBER Meheen expects a major change at the Youth Center as a result of recent developments.

"The new co-directors complement each other. It's great to see. It's really going to be dynamite."

"The activities at the Youth Center are going to be what they were in the 1950s. It's going to take a while but the comeback is going to be there."

"You've got people who are going to be really involved. I really don't think this board is going to sit around fighting."

Meheen, although a critic of the old guard, did say: "Although I had my problems with them, there was never a doubt in my mind that they had their hearts in the right place."

Taylor's goal is to get the city, school district and Youth Center to cooperate and work out a master schedule of programs so that all facilities are used and every age has recreational and cultural activities available.

"That will be the way to get things turned around," said the at-large member. "It will be great. We'll get things going."

Key school budget meeting axed

A KEY Feb. 12 meeting of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education — when trustees were to discuss the financial future of the district — was cancelled at the request of Interim Supt. Rich Hawkins.

Hawkins told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook staff needs more time to prepare its comprehensive budget reports that are to be presented to trustees at their Feb. 25 session.

There also were some "scheduling conflicts" for trustees because the session was to be conducted on a Tuesday because of the Lincoln's Birthday holiday, Hawkins said. Trustee normally meet Monday nights.

In a previous meeting, Hawkins predicted the board will have to generate or cut $300,000 to balance the proposed 1985-86 budget and also grant salary increases of about 6 percent.

The hope is that additional state revenues coupled with the sale or lease of vacant district properties will negate the need for staff layoffs.

The board only has until March 1 to notify administrators of any impending layoffs and teachers must be told by March 15, under state law.

Trustees previously have indicated that if layoffs are necessary they may also have to consider termination of administrators as well as teachers.

However, Hawkins hints that such drastic action may not be necessary.

"I think we may be all right," said Hawkins, who quickly added that he needs more time to study the budget before he recommends that trustees avoid layoffs.

But he is ready to schedule special sessions in case the board decides Feb. 25 that layoffs may have to be pursued.

"We're not going to let it (the deadline) go by without being sure what we're doing," Hawkins said.

During the Feb. 25 session, trustees also are to consider an offer from Pat and Suzanne Faverty to lease the now-closed Carmelo School in Carmel Valley. The couple wants to operate a pre-school and summer camp on school grounds.

In addition, the board is to discuss the potential exchange of 20 acres of district surplus property on Scarlett Road in Carmel Valley.

Alan and Rita Shugart of Pebble Beach have offered two acres of Del Monte Forest property while Eric Scarlett has proposed trading his three small homes on Scarlett Road for the district site.

Both offers were to have been addressed Feb. 12.

A NEW $900 jukebox purchased by the board of directors at its last meeting has enlivened the Carmel Youth Center. Two dances were cancelled recently because the

Youth Center co-director brims with enthusiasm

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CAROLE COLTER sat outside the locked Carmel Youth Center doors. It began to rain as noon approached. It was Thursday, Feb. 7. She was supposed to start work the next Monday.

But the enthusiastic Colter was four days early for her new job and did not have keys to the front door. That's the kind of person she is.

Colter is the new co-director of the Carmel Youth Center, a once-popular place now fallen into such disarray that two recent parent-organized dances had to be cancelled because the stereo remains in the repair shop.

The night before, Feb. 6, the board of directors set aside its long-running internal feud to unanimously select Colter, who will co-direct the Youth Center with Phil Cherry. Both are paid in the neighborhood of $1,500 monthly.

"He's going to be in charge of the plant, Bimobiles (the snackbars-on-wheels at major events like the Crosby and Laguna Seca races), and upkeep and I'm going to be doing the administering, the budget and the programs," Colter told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

As she sat on the cold stone curb outside the building, Colter brushed aside any talk of past problems at the Youth Center. She said it's time to stop playing politics and start running programs.

She offered a cursory comment on the problems: "We just have to change it in a positive way. Let's quit talking about the problems and start working on the positive aspects."

Colter — an almost lifelong resident of Carmel Valley ("When I was four months old I was brought here with my Shetland pony") — admitted that bringing youths back to the youth center is no easy task.

"My job is to build this place up from ground zero," she said. "I don't project 1,000 kids in here in six weeks. We're starting from ground zero. But it can be done and it will be done."

And how will Colter draw the children back, since it's no secret that little is offered at the center nowadays?

By offering what they want in the way of programs rather than what the adults think the young people like.

"Since there's nothing, the first thing we have to do is figure out what the kids want," Colter said.

THE CORNERSTONE of the program planning lies in a survey taken during a drug and alcohol abuse "Awareness Day" at the high school, she said.

As part of the survey, students were asked what kinds of programs they would like to see offered.

Their number one response was more activities at the youth center followed by more organized events at Carmel Beach and a teen night club. With a little work, the youth center could accomplish all three, Colter believes.

She doesn't plan to sit in an office and let the kids come to her. She'll go out and get them, by visiting different school sites and talking to the students.

Colter has a tentative outline of some programs she would like to offer. A top priority is fitness, mostly focusing on jazzercise classes, and a revamped, supervised weight lifting room.

She also would like to see some cultural activities at the center, perhaps a revitalized "follies" or "talent show" that were popular among the kids of the 1950s and 1960s.

But nothing is etched in granite. "It depends upon what the kids want," she said. "That's the bottom line. It's the kids' program."

Colter also hopes to restart the youth board, a group of students who helped former director Jack Giles plan programs.

She also wants to attract the middle school-age students, who will be welcome in the center until 7 p.m., according to the bylaws passed by the board.

"That's where you start; at that age. I'd like to get them started at that age," she said.

Parental support, especially now, is imperative to the fledgling programs, Colter said.

Colter will organize a steering committee of parents and community members to talk about programs at the youth center.

"I'd be thrilled to hear from any parents," she said.

The youth center does not plan to duplicate other programs offered by the city recreation department headed by Steve Taylor. Colter said she wants to meet with Taylor to coordinate programs.

Programs will not be her sole responsibility. She also has to plot a budget, tackle some fund-raising and prepare job descriptions for herself and Cherry.

Colter is not a rookie in recreation nor is she new to the area, being the daughter of longtime Carmel High School counselor Phyllis Crockett. She lives in Carmel Valley with her three-year-old son, Bryan.

After she graduated from Carmel High School in 1974, Colter attended Monterey Peninsula College and received her bachelor of arts degree in recreation administration from California State University, Chico.

For the past nine years she has coached a variety of Carmel High School Padre sports teams. She also was the diving mentor for the Carmel Barracudas swim club.

Her enthusiasm for some theater-type activities is not surprising, since Colter served as the stage manager of the Savannah Theater Co. in San Luis Obispo.

She also served as food and beverage manager of the now-closed Carmel Barnyard Theater.

Community members who wish to serve on the program steering committee now being formed should contact Colter at 624-3285.

Carmel hopes to ban residential area motels

By MICHAEL GARDNER

IF YOU want to pick up a little extra cash next year by renting your home to Crosby golf fans for the weekend, forget it or face the law.

The city of Carmel once again will try to outlaw motels in residential zones.

The planning commission will consider a new "transient occupancy" ordinance when it meets at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 20 in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center, west side of Mission Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues.

The new ordinance is in response to a 1982 Monterey County Superior Court decision (in the Ewing case) that overturned the existing city code which banned motels in the residential zone.

The existing 17 hotels in the residential zone already had been granted non-conforming status and were not affected by the former ordinance. The city council since has legalized the 17 motels, but does not want to allow new inns.

The Ewing case involved a group of homeowners who collectively challenged the legality of the old ordinance.

Judge Ralph Drummond, now retired, agreed: "The ordinance is found to be unconstitutional as it invades the rights of association, privacy and due process."

"Further, the ordinance is overbroad and does not substantially effect its stated goals."

Planner Brian Roseth, who helped City Atty. Don Freeman draft the proposed ordinance, thinks the new proposal will stand up in court.

Roseth believes the court-overturned ordinance was "over-broad, ill-defined and unsupported. I think the court was right on the earlier ordinance."

The old ordinance was based on the "negative rather than the positive," Roseth said.

The former code listed uses allowed in the residential zones and stated that all other uses are prohibited, he said.

"That isn't a very clean way to go to court," Roseth added.

The new proposal "is much more specific, better defined and in conformance with state law and the city general plan," Roseth said.

The basis of the proposed ordinance lies in its definition of a motel as "any building or group of buildings on one site and under one ownership or one management operated pursuant to a valid business license containing five or more guest rooms intended or designed to be used, or which are used, rented or hired out to be occupied, or which are to be occupied primarily for sleeping purposes by transient guests."

BECAUSE A home rented for less than 30 days would not fall under the motel definition, it is considered an illegal transient occupancy use.

That includes weekend rentals for the Bing Crosby Pro-Am golf tournament — a popular time for residents to take vacation and rent their home to another traveler.

Although other city codes still keep these transient rentals illegal, the city has no plans to undertake an active abatement program until after the draft ordinance is adopted by the city council, Roseth said.

Roseth said the city will give operators of illegal motels an opportunity to stop the use before legal abatement steps are taken.

ARCHITECT George Brook-Kothlow will once again try to get planning commission approval of actor Clint Eastwood's office and retail complex. The proposal will be considered the same afternoon that commissioners review a draft ordinance to ban new motels in the residential district. (Michael Gardner photo.)

"We have a number of suspected transient rentals. We'll alert them and give them a chance to stop," he said.

The draft ordinance allows the city to prosecute homeowners and realtors who violate the law. Many realtors represent out-of-town owners who rent their Carmel residences for less than a month. The weekly rentals are openly advertised in realtor windows and in the newspaper.

The ordinance, if endorsed by the planning commission without major changes, will probably be presented to the council in March or April.

But, judging from a few preliminary council comments, the draft ordinance stands a good chance of adoption.

"We see these illegal units as a commercial intrusion in the residential areas," Mayor Charlotte Townsend said.

"I fully agree with some of the people who have complained to me. It seems that they come home to motel row," the mayor said.

Councilman Robert Stephenson agreed: "I think that we need to make an ordinance that will protect the city against commercial use of residential property."

"If we can't protect the city from transient rentals I don't think it will just be little pockets of commercialism, it will take over the whole town," Stephenson said.

"And that will drive up the value of property to a point where people won't be able to afford single family residences and it all becomes commercial."

"The neighborhoods suffer because of the influx of transients who are there for just one day or a few days and don't care about Carmel," according to Councilman David Maradei.

'CARS WILL just litter the streets in those areas. It just takes away the essence of neighborhoods," Maradei said.

In other action Feb. 20, commissioners will once again review actor Clint Eastwood's proposed two-story retail and office complex on the west side of San Carlos Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

A committee of the commission has recommended approval by a 2-1 vote. In favor of the design are architects Richard Barrett and Fred McNulty. Denial was recommended by commission chairwoman Sandy Swain.

The commission has reviewed the project several times and has questions about its design and water use.

THE VALLEY SAGE

BY VICTORIA ANDREWS

Conflict resolution for Valley?

Do you sulk, do you whine, do you turn away to pout?

RESPONDING to last week's column on the Valley losing its cool over a recent supervisorial decision, Darby Worth phoned the Sage to offer a suggestion.

Conflict resolution training is what this community needs, she said, and Georgeanne Taylor is the one to teach it.

Taylor is the director of the Community Board Program of the Monterey Peninsula, which offers intensive training to neighborhoods in how to resolve without revolt. Also, she mediates landlord/tenant disputes to provide an alternative to the court system.

She is under contract with the cities of Seaside and Monterey, and with Fort Ord, to instruct people in ways to discuss their differences without resorting to the behavioral practices of early childhood. To learn more about success vs. sabotage, call Taylor at 394-1992.

"Stay active!" warned John Zierold of the Sierra Club, and he wasn't discussing cardiac conditioning.

The retired director of legislative operations for the California Sierra Club addressed the Feb. 6 annual meeting of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association on the topic, "The threat to planning: the wolf is really here."

Zierold, who is a leading authority on environmental laws and lobbies, had some depressing forecasts about the governmental response to environmental issues. He said the Coastal Commission is in real danger and said he feels that logic has vanished from the California legislature.

He exhorted community residents to involve themselves as closely as possible with political decision-making. "If you don't take part in politics, your remedies will be exhausted for you. If you think politics is dirty, you think democracy is dirty," he said.

However, Zierold pointed to the outrageous costs of political campaigns as a compelling issue which requires change. As an example, he cited Tom Hayden's Assembly race, which cost more than $4 million.

"Someone must pay the bill," he said.

"The target tends to be environmental law."

Presumably Zierold's observation was an allusion to the economically rarified world of successful politicians, many of whose campaigns have been backed by the wealthiest corporations — developers and oil companies, for example. In such instances, the political debt to the contributor may override consideration of the environment, he suggested.

"Our victories are temporary, our defeats permanent," said Zierold, who is adamant that the Sierra Club must be politically active. "Remember what James Watt means to us."

So if you don't like what's happening — or if you do — grab your pen and make it your political sword.

The Boronda 4-H Club of Carmel Valley will give its Fourth Annual 4-H and Open Schooling Horse Show Feb. 17 at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club.

This one-day, all-English show offers 30 classes including five pony-only classes. Most classes are divided into the four age breaks: 10 and under, 11-13, 14-17, 18 and over.

Ribbons will be awarded through fifth place. There will also be five "high point of the day" trophies and five reserve trophies. This includes a pony high point and reserve.

This schooling show is not for 4-H members only. This show is for anyone who owns, leases or can borrow a mount. Clean barn clothes should be worn. The cost to all exhibitors will be $20 for the day per horse/rider or pony/rider combination or $5 per class.

Admission is free. For information, call 624-1015.

Grace Darcy has resigned from the fledgling Women's Resource Center in Carmel Valley Village. The scope of her activities already approaches bionic dimensions, and the Resource Center needed more time than she could give to it. So, please address your inquiries about the center directly to it at 659-3445, and save Grace's number for all her other good works.

Craig Schindler, professor of environmental ethics at UC Santa Cruz, will address the next meeting of the New Forum on Monday, Feb. 18 at The Lodge at Pebble Beach. Among the questions Schindler will address is whether we are overly committed to being right rather than to finding creative solutions to our problems of survival.

He asks whether we acknowledge the depth of sincere motivation of those who oppose our point of view, Schindler said. He is committed to finding answers by which we may move beyond the limitations of the "hawk/dove" dichotomy that prevails on most issues of war and peace. For more information about both the New Forum and Schindler's talk, call Darby Worth at 624-7494.

Water district schedules workshop on dam

The project description for the proposed San Clemente Dam will be reviewed at the second of a series of workshops by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

The meeting will convene at the Seaside Library, 440 Harcourt Ave. at 2 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15. All interested members of the public are encouraged to attend.

Manager Bruce Buel will discuss what water problems face peninsula residents and why San Clemente Dam is considered the most promising solution to date. Buel will outline drought protection, water development for new growth, environmental enhancement and power generation afforded by the dam.

The financial impact on peninsula residents, including user fees, connection charges and revenue bonds also will be discussed. Buel will review when residents can expect to vote on the dam and when it will be built, if approved by the electorate.

John Davis, the consultant writing the environmental impact report, and Darby Fuerst, the district project manager, will also be present to answer questions.

Water Board to stick with election rules on Boronda project

By ROBERT MISKIMON

REGISTERED VOTERS, and not just property owners, will decide the fate of a proposed $350,000 Carmel River erosion control project in the Boronda area in August.

Directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District decided Monday (Feb. 11) to stick with current policy for the mail balloting. That means ballots will be sent to all registered voters who live within the zone — about 200 persons, according to district staff.

Some riverfront property owners in the Boronda area had objected to the balloting method, and asked that the board of directors consider limiting the vote to property owners within the zone.

But directors agreed at their Monday meeting at Monterey City Hall not to change the election procedure by which mail ballots will be sent out to be returned by Aug. 6. A public hearing to explain the project and allow comment is to be scheduled before the mail balloting, said district engineer Gary Page.

Although water district directors did not choose to change their policy for this election, staff recommended that such a change be considered for future projects. "There is a very tight timeline to go with the other method," explained Page, who announced his resignation at the Monday session.

Under the 1911 Municipal Improvement Act, directors could have moved forward with the project either with a protest hearing of property owners, or with an election.

Included with a notice of intention to be mailed to all property owners under the former option, the district would have to include "detailed plans and specifications" of the proposed erosion control project, according to a staff memo to directors.

That procedure also requires control of all properties on which erosion control works are to be carried out, through an easement, right-of-way, or through ownership, Page explained. The election would be decided by a simple majority of property owners.

Page estimated it would take one month of district staff time to complete a set of construction drawings and specifications with the required documentation if the election procedure were to be changed. Another two weeks of work would be required to complete individual parcel maps, he added.

THE EXACT cost to property owners for the Boronda erosion control project has not yet been determined, but will depend to some extent on the availability of outside funding, Page said.

"We're feeling pretty good about getting outside funding," he told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "We should be able to get about $150,000 from the state Urban Creeks Bill and from the Department of Fish and Game."

Two of the objections most frequently raised to the proposed Boronda project concerned equity of the election process and the assessment mechanism, and the fact that outside funding sources had not been explored.

Page said the district should hear next month about availability of those state funds.

In other business, water district directors approved on first reading Ordinance 21, which would generate a "sinking fund" of $5.4 million over a four-year period to be applied toward construction costs of a new dam on the Carmel River.

Fees from new water connections based on water use would provide $1.1 million per year plus interest, and would reduce capital costs of a proposed $34.5 million dam to $29.1 million, according to figures presented by staff.

For the average house, the connection fee would be $1,593; commercial fees would be based on the number of rooms, seats, or square feet and estimated water use.

For example, a 300-unit hotel would pay a connection fee of $481,222; a 100-seat restaurant would be charged $63,738; a 10,000 sq. ft. retail outlet would pay $4,249; and a 10,000 sq. ft. office would be charged $31,869.

Thomas Jamison, attorney for the Pebble Beach Co., told the board his client "can't afford the fee" of $1.4 million for the proposed Spanish Bay golf course, and questioned the "reasonableness" of the fees.

Myron ("Doc") Etienne, attorney for the Northern California Golf Association, said the charges as contemplated "would make the position of the NCGA untenable" with respect to the proposed Poppy Hills golf course in Pebble Beach, which would be charged $1.6 million.

The ordinance is to come before water directors again March 11 for second reading and final adoption.

AS WORK on the Odello East ranch development environmental impact report continues, the city of Carmel has taken further legal steps to block the proposed

162-unit, farmer's market and restaurant complex on Highway 1 just south of Rio

Carmel ready to block Odello permit

THE CARMEL City Council is ready to block any attempt by the county to issue a use permit for development on the eastern Rancho Odello property.

The council — already embroiled in one lawsuit to stop the 162-residential unit, farmer's market and restaurant complex — fears the county has plans to issue a use permit for the development immediately after certification of the environmental impact report on the project.

County planning staffer Lynn Mounday is preparing an analysis of public comments on the administrative draft of the environmental impact report.

His analysis will be combined with public comments and sent back to Environmental Management Consultants of Monterey, which is to prepare the report.

The consultants then will prepare a draft environmental impact report for consideration by the planning commission and board of supervisors.

The county is expected to process the Odello application as a "combined use permit," which means the environmental impact report and tentative tract map will be considered at one time.

The Carmel City Council Feb. 5 unanimously authorized its attorneys to take immediate legal action if the county does issue the use permit for development on the 134-acre site on the east side of Highway 1 about half a mile south of Rio Road.

Carmel is represented by the San Francisco firm of Shute, Mihaly and Weinberger.

The city already has one court case pending that seeks to overturn county rezoning of the Odello East property from prime agricultural land to residential-commercial.

That lawsuit claims state law encourages protection of prime agricultural land. The city also claims the development will have an adverse effect on traffic, water supply and sewage capacity.

A Monterey County Superior Court hearing had been scheduled March 4 on the city challenge to the rezoning. However, the hearing has been delayed at the request of the city and county. No new court date has been set.

But even if supervisors have a mind to, there is a question whether a use permit can be quickly issued on the Odello proposal.

Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver has ruled that the Odello land should be included in the Carmel Valley Master Plan planning area.

If Silver does not relent, the Odellos will be subject to the allocation system for building in the Valley during the next 20 years. Under the draft master plan provisions, only 1,100 new lots of record can be developed in the next two decades.

The Odellos also would have to submit plans to the subdivision evaluation committee, which is to review projects on environmental merits once the master plan is certified. The committee will make recommendations to the planning commission and supervisors on which projects should be allowed.

Silver has under submission a contention by the city of Carmel that the draft master plan still is not adequate. No date has been set for his ruling.

The Odellos, through attorney Ron Hubbard, have tried in vain to have their development excluded from the master plan and its growth-restricting provisions.

Silver twice in the past two years has denied their claims. Hubbard since has filed a new motion with Silver, which is under consideration.

Hubbard said he could not discuss specifics of the case because the matter still is in litigation.

IN ANOTHER matter, the council Feb. 5 briefly discussed legalization of "second kitchens" before it sent the draft ordinance back to the planning commission for further review.

The commission is to conduct a special session on the proposed ordinance March 13.

During the council meeting, several people, including Emily Dunn of the Carmel Board of Realtors, asked that a citizen committee be appointed to develop a compromise.

There have been complaints about the draft ordinance, which would legalize second kitchens, usually defined as a room in a main house or detached garage that has a stove, sink and refrigerator.

The main problems appear to lie with the owner occupancy and rent control provisions of the draft ordinance. The council wants to control rents to ensure that the units are occupied by low- and moderate-income tenants.

The owner occupancy provision requires a landlord to live on the property if he is to obtain permission for a second kitchen.

However, it has been pointed out that at least one Carmel landlord of an illegal second kitchen lives right next door. But under the proposed owner-occupancy requirement he would not be allowed to keep the extra unit.

Peter Wasowski, a resident of San Carlos who also owns a home in Carmel, said he believes a tenant's income "is none of my business." Wasowski was referring to proposed rent controls.

Wasowski asked the council to place the draft ordinance before voters during the next election.

The council referred the issue back to the planning commission at the request of staff, which also wants to respond to some of the questions raised at a workshop on second kitchens attended by about 70 people Jan. 31.

The council also continued until March its review of the city-sponsored questionnaire.

Planner Brian Roseth, who is in charge of the project, had been ill and was unable to finish the changes suggested by the council at its January session.

In other action, the council:

• Authorized in a 3-2 vote the Monterey property to be withdrawn from the Carmel Valley Master Plan, which is stalled before the courts because of legal challenges from the city.

Most of the Monterey property is on the Highway 68 side of the foothills that loom over the north side of Carmel Valley Road. But the developers proposed to build 283 homes at a density of one unit to 10 acres on the Carmel side of the hills.

COUNCIL MEMBERS Helen Arnold and James Wright feared approval would establish a precedent so each property involved in the master plan could ask for a withdrawal.

But the majority of Mayor Townsend, David Maradei and Robert Stephenson believe that not many projects are in two different areas. And they do not foresee many developers coming to them with densities of one unit per 10 acres.

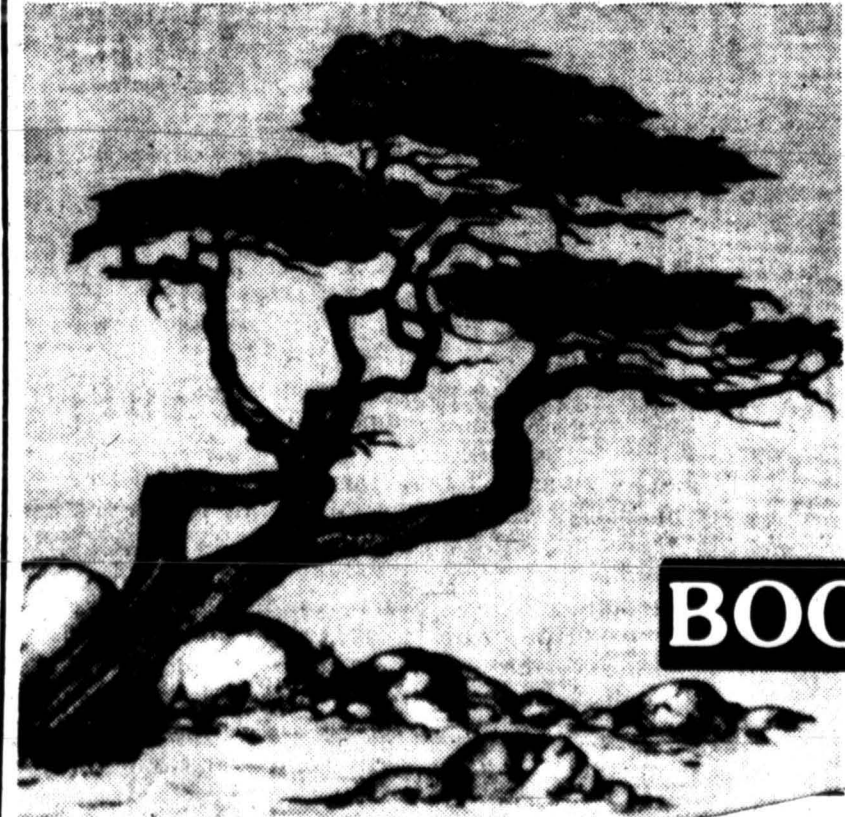

• The council also extended resident parking times in timed zones. The ordinance will allow residents with stickers to park in 20-minute zones for 40 minutes, in one-hour spaces for two hours, and in two-hour areas for four hours.

The ordinance is expected to be adopted on second reading March 5. It would go into effect in April.

Until April, residents still must abide by the existing code that allows for only two-hour parking in one-hour zones. There currently is no double-time allowed residents who park in the 20-minute slots or in the two-hour spaces.

Council members Maradei and Wright opposed the extension because they believe the existing parking program works. They did not want to tie up the timed spaces for that long.

Maradei pointed out that a resident could park in a two-hour timed zone all day simply by moving their car once.

Supervisors reject bed and breakfast use in Carmel area

BED AND breakfast inns will remain illegal in the unincorporated Carmel area.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors Tuesday voted 4-1 to reject a proposed amendment to the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program that would have legalized bed and breakfast inns.

The amendment was supported only by Fourth District Supervisor Sam Karas.

Opponents of bed and breakfast inns feared legalization would add to the parking and traffic problems in the unincorporated Carmel neighborhoods.

Supporters argued that there is a need for less expensive lodging, the tax money would help depleted government budgets, and that owners have a right to do with their property what they wish.

Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend also wrote a letter to supervisors that details why the city council opposes legalized bed and breakfast inns.

"Our residential zoning district borders the Carmel area on three sides. In 1967 the citizens of this community voted to limit the number of motel operations to those that existed at that time," the mayor wrote.

"With one motel unit for every five residents, this community has long suffered from the cumulative impacts of visitor accommodations. These impacts include parking, traffic and noise."

Mayor Townsend's letter also quoted a report that indicates 2,100 more motel rooms are now under construction on the Monterey Peninsula. Another 1,300 are on the drawing boards.

"The first and foremost concern is that potential future development within the planning area would create additional recreation demands on already crowded and over-used facilities," Mayor Townsend wrote.

Mayor Townsend also quoted a section of the land use plan that states: "By significantly increasing the number of visitors to the (Point Lobos) reserve and beaches, new development would contribute to the degradation of sensitive resources, reduce the availability of those areas to others seeking coastal access, and accelerate the need for a reservation system to regulate the overall number of visitors to Point Lobos."

Abalone League active again

The Abalone League is back.

The old league disappeared a decade ago, victim of a declining number of players and intrusion of parked automobiles into its field near Sunset Center on the southeast corner of San Carlos Street and Eighth Avenue.

But now Steve Taylor, city recreation director, wants to resurrect the Abalone League in the form of co-ed socko teams that will play on Sundays at Carmel Middle School or the Youth Baseball field on Rio Road.

Interested players should stop by River School, southeast corner of Monte Verde Street and 15th Avenue, for a rules packet and sponsor sign-up sheet. Sponsor costs are $120.

Only 10 teams will be allowed in the league and registration is on a first-come, first-served basis, Taylor said.

League play will begin March 10. A round robin tournament to determine league champions will pit the top four teams against each other May 19.

Kindergarten enrollment underway

Kindergarten enrollment for the 1985-86 school year now is underway at Carmel River Elementary School.

Early registration helps school officials better plan class sizes and scheduling for next fall, Principal Rosemary Montgomery said.

Last year more students registered on opening day than signed up early, she said.

Kindergarten students must be five years old by Dec. 2, 1985. Parents also must provide a birth certificate and immunization records.

Parents of any school-age children new to the district also are encouraged to register early.

Parents may register their children from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. at the school office, southeast corner of Monte Verde Street and 15th Avenue.

For more information, call 624-4609.

Aid for Menstrual Pain

Cramps. The bad news, nearly half of the young women may experience them. The good news, the cramps often get milder as women get older.

Doctors believe one type of cramps (dysmenorrhea) is caused by higher levels of prostaglandins in the blood. Prostaglandins can cause muscles to contract, leading to lack of oxygen, ischemia, of the uterine muscle, causing pain.

Women with mild cramps often find relief with exercise and relaxation training. Others may turn to prostaglandin inhibiting drugs such as aspirin or ibuprofen. There are alternatives to drugs. Many women found relief with natural and nutritional techniques.

Exercise - daily exercise can help prevent cramps

Vitamin E - a mild prostaglandin inhibitor, anti-inflammatory and vascular supporter.

Calcium - required for normal muscle contraction

Hypnosis - powerful tool in pain control for cramps and other problems like arthritis. Involves relaxation and visualization technique

Nerve Stimulation - nerve impulses control the endocrine glands and the pain pathways at the spinal cord. Electrical stimulation, acupuncture, massage and chiropractic adjustments may decrease cramping.

You no longer have to "put up with" menstrual problems. For more information on the aids mentioned here, call Community Chiropractic Center.

VENTANA REPORT

BY GLENN STEWART

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
VENTANA WILDERNESS SANCTUARY

The majestic bald eagle

IT IS NOT often that we have the opportunity, or even an inclination, to sit in one spot all day and observe wildlife. I did so for three days last week — dawn until dusk — just watching the wilderness days unfold, blossom, and shrink back into night.

The occasion for my observation was a two-year study of wintering bald eagles near Clearlake, Calif. I looked forward to the break it would afford me from the office work that had filled my days for several months.

I did not necessarily dislike the office duty, but I knew of the renewal that had always resulted from past experiences at an "observation point" in the wild. My complete absorption in the foraging activities of creatures within the range of my spotting scope always provided an endless source in interest. And somehow, that absorption always created a subtle, though definite, "head-clearing" effect on me.

My day began in the dim, gray light of dawn. Stationed in an open valley along the north fork of Cache Creek, I paced and stamped my feet in a vain attempt to maintain a degree of warmth inside my boots. The small meadow was white with frost and a high, thin overcast would conceal the warmth of the morning sun for several hours.

I retired to my pack and fired up the tiny Svea stove I always carry on such missions. Soon, there was a bowl of one-minute oatmeal and a cup of "mocha-java" — a decadent blend of cocoa and instant coffee — perched on a log before me.

Nursing tiny sips from the cup held in two grateful hands, I watched for eagles through the steam. An adult female American bald eagle appeared in upstream flight above the creek as reward for my vigilance. Her dark brown plumage appeared black in the dim light and her white head and tail feathers fairly glowed. She set her wings and glided to a snag overlooking a bend in the creek about a quarter mile away.

I could see her every move through the scope. Her long yellow beak pointed this way and that as she scanned the creek for the movement of fish in the shallow water. After the quick survey she turned back over her shoulder to preen some of the feathers on her back.

The eagle roused and shook her plumage and then reached under her wing to preen a few primary flight feathers. Checking the sky with head cocked to one side for a moment, she resumed her study of the creek.

I saw her feathers tighten and head extend forward. She watched intently and then relaxed. A sudden jerk of her head again and she dropped from her perch with wings half closed. She swooped down and out of sight to reappear shortly on a lower perch. An unsuccessful hunt.

My eye had been glued to the spotting scope throughout. I had been unknown part of that eagle's life during its perching, preening and hunting. I continued to watch the bird that was completely engrossed with some activity in the stream while I began to wonder at the extent of my voyeurism into the private life of this eagle.

I also wondered what life must have been like for wildlife biologists before the advent of the Bushnell Spacemaster spotting scope. What a wonder to be a quarter mile downstream, yet seemingly across the creek, from a wild bald eagle!

SUCH THOUGHTS came back to me later in the morning when a flicker of movement on a distant hillside caught my eye. It was a deer — no, three deer. Upon focusing the scope I discovered a total of eight — three bucks and five does — spread out across the hillside. The smaller and obviously younger deer would occasionally romp and chase each other.

The herd browsed along and gradually drifted down to the open flats. I got on a high spot and snapped a few pictures of them through a telephoto lens. They adopted the stance for which we know them best when the deer realized my presence — you know, the one where they see you before you see them.

Long ears are erect and muscles ready to propel them into a quick disappearing act. I guess they decided I was harmless because they drifted back onto the hillside and continued their browsing. It was only then that I noticed the ninth deer. He was a large buck with an impressive rack that had been clinging to the shadows and hidden places while I watched the others.

By mid-day, blue skies and sunshine caused me to shed four layers of clothing and bask in the luxurious warmth. A pair of golden eagles appeared riding the thermals over the eastern horizon. They were little more than dark specks. Again, my trusty scope brought our worlds closer together.

They displayed an early spring courtship flight with the male absolutely eating up the sky in roller coaster-like stoops and rolls. He'd tuck his wings and begin to plummet from his high, circling soar. Spreading huge wings the dive would gently arc back up into the heavens. The arcs were continued one after another in a celebration of spring.

The golden eagles soared and stooped over miles and miles of rolling terrain, yet I knew that I was probably the lone observer of their courtship rites.

There is no pretentiousness in the behavior of wild animals. They never do anything silly, embarrassing or foolish. Their actions are always directed and performed with purpose. Animals do have enjoyable moments — like the soaring eagles or the romping deer — but their enjoyment is tempered by the constraints imposed by the laws of survival.

I shared an observation blind with field biologist and bald eagle specialist Ron Jackman one morning. I asked him if after

Federal cuts won't hurt Carmel grants

DESPITE THREATS by President Reagan to eliminate federal revenue sharing funds given to cities, cultural and community services grants provided by the city of Carmel will continue.

At first it appeared that elimination of federal revenue sharing funds — of which Carmel received about $80,000 in 1984-85 — would threaten the continuance of the grants program.

The city allocated the grants out of its revenue sharing funds received in 1984-85.

But the council last summer adopted a two-year budget at the request of City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

The second year of the budget allocates the grant funds from hostelry taxes — a 10 percent tax levied on the bill guests pay to stay in Carmel motels.

Because the grant money will be allocated from the motel tax next year, the grants are safe from cutting unless the council changes its mind during a budget update in May, Schmitz told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Feb. 11.

"The staff budget that will go to the council will recommend that the grants be funded from the hostelry tax," Schmitz said.

Schmitz will make the recommendation at the urging of the cultural commission.

Several months ago the cultural commission, when it learned the grants would be allocated out of revenue sharing funds, asked that the grant funds be generated by the motel tax next year, Schmitz said.

The city awarded $45,550 to cultural organizations in 1984-85. The largest grant recipients are: the Bach Festival, $17,500; Monterey County Symphony, $8,300; Children's Experimental Theater, $3,800; and Hidden Valley Music Seminars, $3,100.

Many of the organizations, including the Bach Festival and symphony, use the grants to offset the costs of renting Sunset Center.

Another $29,450 was awarded to service organizations such as Meals on Wheels, $5,000; Planned Parenthood, $4,500; Carmel Youth Baseball, $3,450; and the Rape Crisis Line, $3,000.

The cultural commission screens the applications for grants and makes recommendations to the council for the awards.

Schmitz said he has not developed a recommendation on how the city will offset the loss of the revenue sharing funds if Congress agrees with Reagan and trims that subvention to the cities.

Miyasaki resigns school post

ED MIYASAKI, business manager of the Carmel Unified School District for the past 15 months, has announced his resignation effective March 1.

Miyasaki's resignation, which was announced in a letter to the school board Feb. 8, is expected to be accepted by trustees at their Feb. 25 session.

Miyasaki is the second top administrator in the last six months to quit the district. The first was former Supt. William Rand, who resigned Oct. 8.

Rand's departure has sparked a recall drive targeted at the three board members who accepted his resignation: Susan Bromfield, Robert Fenton and James Yates. Trustees Doyle Clayton and Pat Condren, who opposed acceptance of Rand's resignation, are not subjects of the recall campaign.

Miyasaki contended publicly that the political turmoil in the district had nothing to do with his resignation.

"No it didn't," Miyasaki told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "The opportunity arose that I couldn't turn down. That's about it."

Miyasaki refused to discuss details of the offer or even where he is going until the other school district announces his hiring. Miyasaki would only say that the new district is in Northern California.

His departure also comes at a critical time as the school board Feb. 25 must grapple with its budget crisis, sale or lease of school property, and the possibility of staff layoffs. (See related story, this issue.)

Miyasaki has promised to try and work with the Carmel district for two days per week until his replacement can be hired. "It's a flexible situation," he said.

Interim Supt. Rich Hawkins — already in the midst of a recruitment drive to find Rand's successor — now must contend with finding a replacement for Miyasaki.

At press time, Hawkins said "it's too soon" to say how a search for a new business manager will be conducted. He planned to meet with Miyasaki to work out some details this week.

several years of peering into the private lives of eagles and other wildlife, he ever felt a twinge of voyeurism. "Perhaps," he said, "but I never feel guilty about it, because I learn from them. I believe the animals are here to teach us what we have lost to the soft accommodations of civilized life."

His insight expressed a thought I have often had: it is important to preserve wilderness and wildlife not only because it is our stewardship responsibility, but because we as humans can benefit from the instruction the natural world offers.

Monterey Savings celebrates tenth anniversary in Carmel

TEN YEARS in the same spot is more than I can say for myself, so I tip my hat to the Monterey Savings Carmel branch on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue.

Bank personnel are celebrating their 10-year birthday in Carmel and the general manager and vice president, Robert Giraudo, is as proud as he can be.

"I think about how the city needs and wants local services and that here we are right smack in the middle of downtown Carmel providing the locals with their banking needs," Giraudo said. "We deal almost exclusively with locals."

Monterey Savings was created on the peninsula by Glen and Mary Littlefield in 1929, Giraudo said. The Littlefield family owned the savings and loan until the death of Robert C. Littlefield in 1982, when it was sold to Coast Federal Savings. The sale made it a part of 130 offices in the state of California.

The Carmel branch office was opened 10 years ago on its current location in the Leidig house which then sat on the San Carlos Street corner. Five years later, the present building was constructed but rather than demolish the old house that had served so many so well, it was moved to its present location at Second Avenue and Torres Street.

"It lives again as a private residence," Giraudo said. "The Carmel office started with zero deposits and our first depositor — a local resident, Ted Lehring — got us off to a flying start. We now have in excess of $20 million in total deposits," Giraudo said. "I have been with this office since 1974 and saw it grow. I know 90 percent of my customers on a first-name basis."

Giraudo feels confident about the future of the company. "Monterey Savings' strength lies in the fact that our lending is backed by first mortgages in California real estate and we are now involved in the international lending that is causing so much concern."

"The banking industry has witnessed more changes since 1974 than took place in the previous 50 years and the next five years will probably double those changes," Giraudo said.

"All of these changes were primarily from the deregulation of the banking industry which removed government regulation of interest rates. Competitive forces now regulate the interest rates."

Giraudo said he anticipates changes in the banking industry that include more automatic teller machines and the end of sending checks back monthly to the customer. Not necessarily at his branch, however.

"We want to deal with human beings in the way Carmel residents are used to and want. People move here to escape the plastic world elsewhere. We don't want to lose the ability to deal with people individually," Giraudo said.

STRAW HAT PIZZA HAS NEW OWNERS

If all the new owners of the Straw Hat Pizza Parlor in The Crossroads ordered a pizza, it would definitely have to be an extra large with all the toppings. (No anchovies, of course, but does anyone really order anchovies?)

The new owners are Dick and Shirley MacFarlane, James and Patricia Dunlap, and Arnie and Virginia MacFarlane. Maybe they thought it would be cheaper to buy the place. Dick and Shirley MacFarlane and the Dunlaps will move from San Jose to the peninsula. Arnie MacFarlane is a chaplain with the Army, stationed elsewhere, so he is what might be called the silent partner.

The group opened the pizza parlor between Longs Drugs and Safeway Feb. 6 after building a new interior with partitions and paneling.

"We took some key steps to cut down the noise level," Dick MacFarlane said. "We want it to be an enjoyable, wholesome family place. We also will be discounting to senior citizens in the area."

The parlor will be "looking for birthday parties and large groups," MacFarlane added, and will deliver now within a three-mile radius, with the possibility of expanding that at a later date.

The Straw Hat will dish up pizza, sandwiches, soft drinks, beer and wine with table service.

RICKYS JEWELERS OPENS DOORS

After five months for a remodeling, Rickys Jewelers on San Carlos Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues has opened its doors. The jewelry store is an immigrant from Klamath Falls where it was started by Anne Rickbeil in 1937. Mrs. Rickbeil and her daughter Tamara sold that business and moved to Carmel, the prettiest little town they had ever been in, said Tamara Rickbeil.

MONTEREY SAVINGS Carmel Branch Manager and Vice President Robert Giraudo celebrates the 10th year of the branch he opened in 1974. Standing with him is Valerie Lostrom, part-time teller and assistant to the manager, who started with the branch when it opened on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue in the Leidig House. (Mike Gardner photo.)

The shop, Tamara Rickbeil said, "is a middle-range price store, with prices from $50 all the way up the scale."

The shop will do small repairs, bead restringing and custom designing, Mrs. Rickbeil added, and carries "a large selection of engagement rings" along with carved opals, "like cameos," and men's diamond and semiprecious stone rings, freshwater and cultured pearls, gold chains and more.

COMPUTERS INVADE CARMEL

Trees might seem a strange reason to bring computers to Carmel, but David Dilworth wanted to leave Pacific Grove because the city was cutting down all the trees.

"I like a government with backbone," he said. Welcome to Backbone City, Mr. Dilworth. Go ahead. Start a business. Make their day.

Dilworth is moving his Computer Systems business from Pacific Grove to the Pantilles Court on Dolores Street between Computer Systems, Dilworth said, provides consulting and support services for multi-user computer systems.

"We are a 'responsible firm,'" he said. "That means we take full responsibility for the information. The buck stops here and there is no finger pointing."

"We design, install and support multi-user stations. If after six months it doesn't do what you want it to do, we take it back with a full refund."

No program gets up and runs without any problems, Dilworth said, but he uses a program generator that cuts down on "bugs." A program generator has mini-programs or sub-routines that can be put together to suit the client's needs.

"The advantage is that these routines are already 'debugged' and proven," Dilworth said.

"Our specialties are manufacturing, medical and legal," Dilworth added. "We can service from one to 85 work stations."

Dilworth added he wants to move to Carmel so he can walk to his office. Obviously, he has tried to park here before.

FRESH PRODUCE AT CARMEL RANCHO

Spring is on its way and there will be a fresh produce crop popping up at the Carmel Rancho shopping area. Garzone's at 26340 Carmel Rancho Blvd. has been returned to Sam Garzone. He and his new partner, Joe Ditty, are putting about $100,000 into remodeling the liquor, deli and meat store to turn it into a place with "prime-aged meats, finest quality produce, deli and liquor store," Ditty said.

"We are taking the old style freezers and replacing them with the modern stand-up style, painting all the trim forest green and the employees will be dressed in coordinating khaki and forest green outfits with aprons," he said.

"The produce will be brought in every day from San Francisco and will be a complete full line of goods," Ditty said. "The meats are the best and aged properly."

The deli, he added, will have "hot foods to go, pasta, and foods that are prepared and can be heated up at home." (That's for people like me who had to ask what fresh basil looks like. I guess I flunked the Yuppie qualification test.)

The liquor department will continue to be full liquor sales — spirits, beer, and a "good selection of wine," Ditty said. "We will have select liquor on sale for 5 percent above cost."

If getting to the store is a problem, Garzone's has that covered, too, with free delivery.

The store will remain open during the changeover except for four to five days in the end of March, Ditty said.

"We want everything done by April 1," he said.

TOWLE CAPITAL SETTLES IN

Herb Towle has finished with the arranging and settling-in of his Towle Capital Corp. in Carmel Rancho on Via Nona Marie and is "pleased to announce my (Towle) association with Alan Altree of Altree Insurance for the purpose of writing and servicing general insurance clients."

Towle services not only insurance needs, but as a licensed Real Estate Broker, his clients' real estate needs as well.

"My family has been in insurance and real estate since 1919," Towle said. "I am carrying on the tradition."

"We cover all areas of personal and commercial insurance, including home, auto, yacht and airplane policies," Towle said. "In addition, we provide risk management services to large companies."

As a licensed real estate broker, Towle said he serves as an "all real estate buyer-broker."

Towle and his wife Else have lived on the peninsula since 1978.

ORANGE JULIUS, SWENSEN'S TO STAY THROUGH SUMMER

An update of the Orange Julius and Swensen's Ice Cream move from the corner of Ocean Avenue and Mission Street: it seems the two stores will stay there through the summer and not be out until "sometime in early fall" according to Cabrille Kilian, leasing agent for the Dick Bruhn stores.

"There were some questions about when the leases were signed," she said. "It's been 15 years."

The delay from the original early spring or summer move date will not adversely affect the shoe store from moving in, she said.

"They (the shoe store owners) were warned that this might happen," Kilian said.

Bogie stars in 'Casablanca'

The 1942 movie classic, Casablanca, starring Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman and Peter Lorre will be shown Friday, Feb. 15 in the Monterey Peninsula College Theater.

Admission is $3 general; $2 for MPC students, seniors and children under 12. MPC is at 980 Fremont, Monterey.

Competitive winners announced

Winners of the Central Coast Art Association competitive, whose works are displayed through Feb. 28 at the Marjorie Evans Gallery in Sunset Center, Carmel, are:

First, Lily Trube, Green and Red Composition; second, Paulla, Stargates; third, David Martin-Loza, The Silk Shirt; fourth, Mary E. Thomas, A Quelle Distance.

Anne Donnelley won the People's Choice award for Morning Mist.

'Teddy Bears' bow in Monterey

Anyone who brings a teddy bear to the Sunday, Feb. 17 performances of The Secret Lives of the Teddy Bears at the Monterey Youth Center will receive $1 off admission.

The original musical by Max Robert of Pacific Grove has been staged at Cherry Hall and will move to the Youth Center on Sunday only. Curtain is at 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. Admission is $3 for children, $5 for adults.

Tickets can be purchased at the 1887 Shop, Carmel Plaza; Monterey Youth Center, 777 Pearl St., Monterey; Monterey Parks and Recreation Department, 546 Dutra St., Monterey; and Sprouse-Reitz, 588 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. The event is sponsored by the City of Monterey Parks and Recreation Department.

CASA VASQUEZ NEAR OLD JAIL

Casa Vasquez, at 546 Dutra St., Monterey, is now the address of the Monterey Park and Recreation Dept. Originally, though, it was the home of Dolores Vasquez, sister of the notorious bandit Tiburcio Vasquez, and by a quirk of fate, situated behind the old jail. Vasquez was familiar with both structures. He often hid out at his sister's house while the sheriff scoured the countryside for him.

Two weddings on same day in Carmel and the Valley

After a honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edwards will reside in La Canada following their Feb. 2 wedding in the Carmel Presbyterian Church.

The bride is the former Jacqueline Lee Cunningham of Carmel, the daughter of retired Col. and Mrs. Robert F. Cunningham of Monterey. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John U. Edwards of La Crescenta.

She is a teacher in the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District and a graduate of Monterey High School and California State University at Long Beach. He is an alumnus of the University of California, Long Beach and a freelance writer.

Matron of honor was Frances Burcham of Silver Springs, Md., sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Pamela Edwards-Thompson of Beverly Hills, sister of the groom; Kim Stannard and Carolyn Orr, both of Monterey, and Virginia Comer of Long Beach.

Ryan and Christian Edwards, sons of the groom, were attendants to their father. Peter DeBono of Salinas, Michael Edwards of Bakersfield, Chakib Sambar of La Crescenta and David Stihler of Carmel served as ushers.

A reception was given in La Novia and Terrace rooms at the Naval Postgraduate School.

CYNTHIA MARSHALL WEDS KEITH BIGBEE

Wedding vows were exchanged between Cynthia Elizabeth Marshall and Keith Lawrence Bigbee, both of Carmel Valley, Feb. 2 in St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church.

The couple left for a Hawaiian honeymoon, after which they will live in Carmel Valley, where the bridegroom is employed as a builder for a Carmel Valley contractor. The bride is an electronics student at Monterey Peninsula College.

Their wedding date coincided with the 38th wedding anniversary of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Marshall of Carmel Valley, and with the 55th wedding anniversary of the bridegroom's maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Packard of Hemet. All attended the wedding.

The bride is the sister of Pamela Marshall of Silver Spring, Md., Mrs. Paul Lapidus of Aromas, David Marshall of Sunnyvale, Mrs. John Paul of Carmel and Ernest R. Marshall of San Diego.

She is an alumna of the American Embassy School in New Delhi, India as well as York School in Monterey and California State University, Chico.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence R. Bigbee of Carmel and attended Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa.

Maid of honor was Connie Porterfield of Salinas. Attendants to the bride were Stacey Burt of Darien, Conn. and Darcia Blackdeer of Chico. Best man was Craig Conant of Pacific Grove. Ushers were Michael Sherman of Carmel and Paul Levesque of Garden Grove.

CARMEL ARTIST TO LEAD TOUR OF FRANCE

Carmel artist Paulla Rogers, who recently helped paint and renovate the statue of Junipero Serra in Carmel, will lead a tour of southern France this May.

JACQUELINE CUNNINGHAM of Carmel was married Feb. 2 to Thomas Edwards of La Canada in Carmel Presbyterian Church.

Rogers will assist Rosalind Sprague, a Boston tour conductor. Highlights of the trip will include a one-week barge cruise on the Canal du Midi in Provence, the Cote d'Azur, Paris, and Monet's gardens at Giverny.

Rogers, a multimedia artist, will be available to artists who take the tour for guidance and instruction in the media of their choice for location work. She has been internationally honored for her work and has instructed art classes in public schools of California and Oregon, for Headstart programs and adult art classes.

Paulla Rogers now teaches in Pacific Grove, gives location workshops, and instructs private students in her Carmel studio. Her works are exhibited in Monterey Peninsula galleries and in Maine.

More information on the trip may be obtained from Rosalind Sprague at 624-7805.

LISA MINSHEW ON HONORS LIST

Lisa Minshew, daughter of Anne Minshew of Carmel and Robert Minshew of Orlando, Fla., was named to the honors list at Claremont McKenna College in Claremont, Calif. for the fall semester. She is a freshman.

MICHAEL LISSAUR ON DEAN'S LIST

Michael Lissaur of Carmel was named to the dean's list at Washington State University for the fall semester. The college is located in Pullman, Wash.

SYMPHONY GUILD PLANS CABARET FRANCAIS

The Monterey County Symphony Guild will present its second "Cabaret Francais" at the Monterey Sheraton Tuesday, Feb. 19, featuring singer Marie-Therese Taylor.

The evening begins with hors d'oeuvres at 7 p.m. and dinner at 7:30 p.m. Entertainment begins at 8:30 p.m.

"When Marie appeared in the B-Sharp Follies last fall with her deep earthy voice and excellent range, the audience requested more," said Guild spokeswoman Lee McKee. "So we have another evening of Piaf, Brel and Trenet."

The benefit dinner will be preceded by a preview salad luncheon and boutique at 11:30 a.m. Feb. 19 at All Saints Episcopal Church Parish Hall at Lincoln Street and Ninth Avenue in Carmel.

Jim Setapin, guest conductor and candidate for music director of the symphony, will preview the Feb. 24-26 concerts.

For dinner reservations, call 625-2416.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

"One today is worth two tomorrows."

— Benjamin Franklin

Anyone who still thinks that advancing age brings a declining interest in sex hasn't read the latest statistics. The most recent Consumers Union report on "Love, Sex And Aging" shows that the senior years bring little lessening of sexual desires or abilities. The survey of more than 4,000 men, and women aged 50 to 93 found that two-thirds of the men and four-fifths of the women over age 70 had remained sexually active.

Do you know which ethnic groups of the American population our seniors come from? According to figures compiled by the U.S. Census Bureau, Russian-Americans have the highest proportion of people over age 65 among the population, 27.4 percent. They're followed by Polish-Americans at 19.2 percent; English-Americans at 17.9 percent and Irish-Americans at 16.3 percent.

Remember When? 1950 — A federal minimum wage of 75 cents per hour went into effect.

SERRA BICENTENNIAL BY MSGR. FRANCES WEBER

A pause for reflection

DURING 1776, a significant year in American history when political and social experiments were being tested on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, the Juan Bautista de Anza expedition marched north through the mission territory of Alta California and occasioned a survey of the development up to that time.

The mission system in California was only seven years old in 1776. For the moment, San Juan Capistrano did not exist. San Diego lay in ruins, awaiting resurrection; because of its poor resources for agriculture, many of its converted Indians still lived in their rancherías and were often Christian in name only. San Luis Obispo, San Antonio, San Carlos and San Gabriel were relatively prosperous.

Though the early days at San Gabriel had been difficult, by 1776 the mission was flourishing. It was built in the midst of broad plains; abundant water was at hand; pasture was plentiful; forests of live oaks provided timber for firewood and building. The mission had horses, cows, pigs, sheep and chickens.

In his diary, Fray Pedro Font said the cows were fat, the milk rich and the mutton finer than any he had ever tasted. Another friar had called San Gabriel the "Promised Land" and Font echoed him.

In 1776, all roads led to San Gabriel. Southeast the overland route was now open all the way to Mexico City, north to San Francisco, south to San Diego and Baja California. This was the gateway to coastal California.

The buildings at San Gabriel were still rather primitive. Some were made of adobe, but most were built of logs and tule. The friars lived in a long shed where grain was also stored. The church was a rectangular edifice. Eight soldiers lived in the guardhouse. About 500 Indians resided in native huts close to the mission and an aqueduct ran between their homes and the mission.

The mission system which Font found in operation at San Gabriel was the pattern upon which all the other missions were based, a system begun in Texas, followed in the Sierra Gorda and then transmitted to Alta California.

Attracted to the missions by the padres, the Indians lived as catechumens until they were ready for baptism. During this period, they were taught the elements of the Catholic faith, were fed and clothed, taught to work and to follow the routine of mission life.

If, after several months, they had learned the catechism and desired to become Christians, they were baptized. Thereafter they were required to live permanently at the mission and to learn to live a fuller Christian life in the pattern of Spanish culture.

Converts were given permission to visit their pagán relatives for a few days at a time; it gave the Indian a change of routine and the mission Indians often brought more of their relatives and friends to the mission. Runaways who had been baptized were sought out and returned to the mission.

After sunrise, the Indians assembled at the sound of the bell, assisted at Mass, and recited with the padre the doctrina a compendium of Christian doctrine and prayers.

About $20,000 raised last year

FOCUS uses phones to get school funds

By MICHAEL GARDNER

INSIDE the normally staid offices of the Carmel Valley stock brokerage firm Merrill Lynch one recent evening about a dozen people rang noisemakers and sounded horns while they sipped white wine, soda and orange juice.

Was it a tardy New Year's Eve party celebrated by the Procrastinators' Society?

Not at all. It was another in a series of February Wednesday night "phone-a-thons" sponsored by the Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS) and operated by members of parent clubs.

And despite the party atmosphere the activity is serious — raising money to supplement the cash-short Carmel schools.

Last year members of FOCUS conducted the event by themselves and raised about $20,000 when matching grants from anonymous donors were added to the total, FOCUS President Ken White told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

The funds are disbursed to the different schools within the district to help supplement the budgets. Schools submit proposals for funding and the FOCUS board chooses which programs to help.

This year FOCUS adopted a new policy toward distribution of its funds raised by the phone-a-thon. Parent clubs were invited to take a night and use the telethon to raise funds by calling other parents of children in the same school, White said.

When the phone-a-thons are completed at the end of February, the funds will be distributed to each parent club on a formula basis.

"The phone-a-thon guarantees each school parent club a set amount of dollars depending on the population of the school and the number of phone calls made," White said.

The phone-a-thon has raised $10,000 so far without figuring in matching grants to be donated by individuals. The matching fund amount is dependent on how many pledges are received, White said.

White said the question most commonly asked of the volunteer callers is what position FOCUS has taken on the recall campaign targeted at school board President Susan Bromfield and trustees Robert Fenton and James Yates.

"We get a lot of questions about the political situation. The FOCUS board is not getting involved on any side. Our goal is to support the kids in the classroom," White said.

THIS WEDNESDAY night, Feb. 6, it was the Carmel Middle School parents' turn to run the phone-a-thon.

Volunteers who arrived at Merrill Lynch — opened compliments of the resident vice-president Michael O'Leary — were greeted by smiling faces painted on posters on the wall just under the Wall Street ticker tapes.

THE NORMALLY-staid office of Merrill Lynch at the mouth of the Valley has been the scene of Wednesday night "parties" where volunteers raise money for the public schools while sipping refreshments and tooting horns when a donation is pledged. (Michael Gardner photo.)

"Smile with your voice," urged one smiling face.

At each desk there was either a noisemaker or horn that awaited the "toot" or "clack clack clack," which signaled another pledge.

But before the volunteers started to dial the 659, 624 and 625 telephone numbers, they were ushered into a back-room where Brian Kelly awaited.

Kelly, husband of Carmel High School Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly, played the part of the football coach giving his lagging team a halftime pep talk.

In the background there was a large thermometer marked in red each time donations reach another plateau. Kelly talked about being polite, yet forceful in the discussions with potential donors.

"If they think you're Caspar Milquetoast, then you've lost them," Kelly laughed.

Clutched in each volunteer's hand was a multi-colored playbook that explained why they were there, gave helpful telephone mannerisms and explained what to do if a phone goes unanswered.

"Be enthusiastic, positive, friendly and smile — it will show in your voice. Remember, both you and the parent donor are proud of our schools and share a commitment to the school's striving for excellence," urged the guide.

"Never be apologetic for what you are doing. You are a volunteer working for our schools and you have every reason to be proud of the contribution you are making.

"Be sure to be non-political and avoid getting into current political discussions. Our bottom line is the kids. We must be above the political problems and the turmoil. FOCUS is totally non-political and dedicated to school support."

Some strategies on who to speak to and how to urge the larger donation are perhaps best left secret in case you get a phone call next Wednesday.

There's even one of those "verbatim" that outside sales people memorize for their presentations. However, after a few calls parents are urged to "develop their own style."

After Kelly's pep talk the parents were let loose to the phones. As they exited the back room, White and fellow member Jim Langley shook the volunteers' hands and offered words of encouragement.

Barbara Zellmer was one of the first to spot her desk. "I'm going to stick with my lucky desk," she said as she plops down in the front row.

"I'M HERE because I want to help the kids so we can raise some money to supplement the school budget," Zellmer said to explain why she was there and not in a comfortable easy chair watching The Fall Guy.

Another parent, Candy Smith, said: "I like to be a little involved. I have a baby at home so this is easier for me to help in the evening."

Meanwhile, CMS Assistant Principal Dee Dresser was on the phone. She clanged her noisemaker and brought roars of laughter when she said: "When I say this is Dee Dresser they think their kids are in trouble. Then when I ask them (for a donation) they just say 'how much do you want?'"

Sandra Shoemaker called FOCUS "important" to the future of many of the extra school offerings.

"Many of the programs going on down at the middle school wouldn't be going on without FOCUS," Shoemaker said.

Grants from FOCUS to the middle school help finance the after-school sports and music programs. Donations also purchased microscopes for the science classes and helped pay the costs of additional computers, Shoemaker pointed out.

FOCUS has donated funds through all the schools for a variety of programs, projects and materials.

The volunteers respond to each pledge with a form letter and personal note thanking the parents for their contributions.

Those who would like to contribute to FOCUS or help wrap up the last two sessions of the phone-a-thon are asked to call White in the evenings at 624-4538.

The Chieftains bring Ireland's magic to Carmel

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THEY'VE OPENED for the Rolling Stones, entertained the pope and jammed with a Chinese folk orchestra — without losing track of their own musical roots. Such is the one-of-a-kind career of The Chieftains, six upholders of traditional Irish music.

When The Chieftains appear at Sunset Theater in Carmel at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 14, it will be but one stop in a two-month tour that "chief" Chieftain Paddy Moloney calls, "a murderous one, but we're looking forward to it."

Moloney's Dubliner brogue is authentic, his voice cheerful during a telephone interview from Beverly Hills — but one of 24 he must sustain that day. If touring six months of the year is indeed "quite a bit of a haul," the band's spokesman doesn't sound like it.

"Always, with every piece, variation of phrasing comes into it each night," Moloney says. "It's never the same. This keeps the whole band alive and very much enjoying ourselves. Just like in jazz, someone will take off and do something that sparks the others."

The Chieftains, whose name was inspired by Irish poet John Montague, made their first album in 1963. To most Americans, both the names and look of many of their instruments are exotic.

Paddy Moloney plays Uilleann pipes and tin whistle. Percussionist Kevin Conneff plays bodhran; Matt Malloy, flute; Derek Bell, Irish harp, timpan (dulcimer) and piano. Martin Fay and Sean Keane are the fiddlers.

The Chieftains won an Oscar for their contribution to the score of Barry Lyndon. The 1976 Stanley Kubrick feature marked their first venture into the world of film. In 1983 they won a Genie, the Canadian equivalent of an Oscar, for composition and performance of music in The Grey Fox, a film about the first Canadian train robber.

"I've just written a score for Ballad of the Irish Horse, to be screened March 6 on PBS," Moloney said. "It's quite magnificent. It was in fact written for full orchestra and Chieftains. We will play you a suite from it in Carmel."

The Chieftains continually build their repertoire, both through composing original works and adapting folk music they encounter during world travels.

A TOUR of the People's Republic of China in 1983 became, as Moloney remembers it, "one of the great highlights of The Chieftains' career."

"We were playing at the Albert Hall in London, and a group of Chinese enjoyed the concert so much, they invited us. It took about three years to get it all together."

Moloney maintained three stipulations for this special concert: "a recording unit, a television crew and also, for each concert, a Chinese folk orchestra available to play with us."

Irish folk music was sent ahead, which the Chinese players learned. "We did likewise with some Chinese tunes and we had a jam session. The closeness of the instruments was totally amazing. It's out on a new album, The Chieftains in China."

Members of the Sunset Theater audience

PLAYING both traditional Irish music and their most recent compositions in a Valentine's Day concert will be The Chieftains. The band comes to Sunset Theater at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 14. The theater is at San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. For ticket information, call 624-3996.

will note that The Chieftains brought a bit of China back with them. A Chinese musician will join them on stage and play the erhu.

"It's a two-string sort of miniature cello that sits on your knee," Moloney explained. "And we actually brought a Chinese gong."

A Wisconsin music writer made note of the Chieftain composition Full of Joy: "The tune incorporated a distinctly Oriental feel to become a Sino-Celtic reel."

While musical innovation is a constant in the group's lengthy career, they've not forgotten the Irish reels, traditional ballads and ethereal harp compositions that brought them fame.

"We are, in fact, unique throughout the world in that we cover the full range of traditional Irish instruments. We can cover the whole range of rhythms and tunes."

The "chief" Chieftain also said the group tours about six months of the year.

"We always like to touch base to get back to our roots. Derek 'Ding Dong' Bell is from Belfast. We've a west of Ireland man, Matt Malloy. The rest are from Dublin. The whole of 32 counties of Ireland is magnificent. We play as much in the north of Ireland as in the south."

In the summer of 1982 The Chieftains opened for the Rolling Stones at Slane Castle in Dublin before a crowd of 80,000.

"They've been fans of ours for many, many years," Moloney said. "Jagger has been a great fan."

Kevin Conneff, the band's bodhran player, presented Stones' drummer Charlie Watts with a bodhran of his own. A jam session followed.

The Stones' gig seemed but a warmup compared to a concert before a crowd of 1,350,000 at Phoenix Park in Dublin. In attendance at that show was the reigning pontiff, John Paul II.

"It wasn't our gig — we were just the opening act. The pope was the headliner," Moloney quipped.

Following another concert in Rome, Pope

John Paul spoke to the band members for a few minutes, and commented: "It must have been the music that got St. Patrick to Ireland in the fifth century."

The Chieftains remain a very lively blend of contemporary and traditional. Just ask the pope, Mick Jagger, or any of their other fans.

Reserved seating for The Chieftains' concert is available through the Sunset Center Director's Office, Eighth and San Carlos, Carmel, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tickets are $8 and $10. For details, call 624-3996.

Award-winning pianist to make West Coast debut

IN HER first West Coast performance, German pianist Babette Hierholzer will appear at Sunset Theater, Carmel, at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15. The concert is presented by the Carmel Music Society.

Hierholzer, who is a regular recitalist with the Salzburg Festival, made her first public performance at the age of 11 in the Philharmonic Hall, Berlin. She was a student at the Juilliard School of Music and also studied under Paul Badura-Skoda, Bruno Leonardo Gelber, Lili Kraus and Maria Tipo. Seven first places in the Steinway Competition and two first prizes in the National German Piano Contest have been awarded to her.

A high point in her career was her part in the recent film, Spring Symphony, about Clara and Robert Schumann, in which she doubled for Nastassia Kinski in all the piano scenes.

The program for the Carmel concert will include four sonatas by Scarlatti, D-minor, L. 413, C-major, L. 457, D-minor, L. 423, and D-minor, L. 422, the Variations in D-minor from the String Sextet, B-flat major, op. 18, by Brahms, Masques and L'isle joyeuse by Debussy and Carnaval, op. 9, by Schumann.

Tickets are available at Bartlett's Music, Carmel; Do Re Mi Music, The Barnyard, Carmel; Abinante Music, Monterey; Bookworks, Pacific Grove, or by calling the Carmel Music Society, 372-1226. Prices are $9, $10 and $11. Some student tickets are available free of charge upon request.

BABETTE HIERHOLZER, pianist, is a regular recitalist with the Salzburg Festival and made her first public performance at the age of 11.

Al Weber totes camera with a cause

By ANNE PAPINEAU

PICK UP the 1980 catalogue for the University of California Extension, and there is one instructor described as the man who "has probably taught more photographic workshops than any other person in the western hemisphere." Carmel Highlands lensman Al Weber isn't about to refute that.

"For a long time I was teaching 35 to 40 workshops a year," Weber said. "Now I do 20 a year. The more you do it, the better you get."

Al Weber is one of the grand old men of the stop bath and fix, in a part of the world that draws photographers like dust to negatives. From 1963 to 1981, he taught at the Yosemite photography workshops with his friend, the late Ansel Adams. This assignment he gave up only when his own art school at Victor, Colo., demanded increasing attention.

ARTS & LEISURE

He continues to lead a "red-eye special" to the Lonesome Triangle of the Mojave Desert, where he coaches UC Extension students to develop their own interpretation of stationary sand dunes.

Structures of historical interest, from South County packing sheds to peninsula "painted ladies," gain notice and an occasional wrecking ball reprieve thanks to Weber's roving lens.

He documents Native American rock art, some of it local, most of it endangered by man and the elements. "It's kind of like hunting mushrooms," Weber said. "You do it and don't tell people about it."

Starting this week, Weber will lead the first Victor School photography workshops based in his own backyard, the Monterey Peninsula.

"I started Victor School in 1977, in an old brick schoolhouse," Weber said of the Colorado school. "But at 10,000 feet, it's a very short season there. There's still snow on

"Smile with your voice," urged one smiling face.

At each desk there was either a noisemaker or horn that awaited the "toot" or "clack clack clack," which signaled another pledge.

But before the volunteers started to dial the 659, 624 and 625 telephone numbers, they were ushered into a back room where Brian Kelly awaited.

Kelly, husband of Carmel High School Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly, played the part of the football coach giving his lagging team a halftime pep talk.

In the background there was a large thermometer marked in red each time donations reach another plateau. Kelly talked about being polite, yet forceful in the discussions with potential donors.

"If they think you're Caspar Milquetoast, then you've lost them," Kelly laughed.

Clutched in each volunteer's hand was a multi-colored playbook that explained why they were there, gave helpful telephone mannerisms and explained what to do if a phone goes unanswered.

"Be enthusiastic, positive, friendly and smile — it will show in your voice. Remember, both you and the parent donor are proud of our schools and share a commitment to the school's striving for excellence," urged the guide.

"Never be apologetic for what you are doing. You are a volunteer working for our schools and you have every reason to be proud of the contribution you are making.

"Be sure to be non-political and avoid getting into current political discussions. Our bottom line is the kids. We must be above the political problems and the turmoil. FOCUS is totally non-political and dedicated to school support."

Some strategies on who to speak to and how to urge the larger donation are perhaps best left secret in case you get a phone call next Wednesday.

There's even one of those "verbatim" that outside sales people memorize for their presentations. However, after a few calls parents are urged to "develop their own style."

schools while sipping refreshments and tooting horns when a donation is pledged. (Michael Gardner photo.)

After Kelly's pep talk the parents were let loose to the phones. As they exited the back room, White and fellow member Jim Langley shook the volunteers' hands and offered words of encouragement.

Barbara Zellmer was one of the first to spot her desk. "I'm going to stick with my lucky desk," she said as she plops down in the front row.

"I'M HERE because I want to help the kids so we can raise some money to supplement the school budget," Zellmer said to explain why she was there and not in a comfortable easy chair watching The Fall Guy.

Another parent, Candy Smith, said: "I like to be a little involved. I have a baby at home so this is easier for me to help in the evening."

Meanwhile, CMS Assistant Principal Dee Dresser was on the phone. She clanged her noisemaker and brought roars of laughter when she said: "When I say this is Dee Dresser they think their kids are in trouble. Then when I ask them (for a donation) they just say 'how much do you want?'"

Sandra Shoemaker called FOCUS "important" to the future of many of the extra school offerings.

"Many of the programs going on down at the middle school wouldn't be going on without FOCUS," Shoemaker said.

Grants from FOCUS to the middle school help finance the after-school sports and music programs. Donations also purchased microscopes for the science classes and helped pay the costs of additional computers, Shoemaker pointed out.

FOCUS has donated funds through all the schools for a variety of programs, projects and materials.

The volunteers respond to each pledge with a form letter and personal note thanking the parents for their contributions.

Those who would like to contribute to FOCUS or help wrap up the last two sessions of the phone-a-thon are asked to call White in the evenings at 624-4538.

The Chieftains bring Ireland's magic to Carmel

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THEY'VE OPENED for the Rolling Stones, entertained the pope and jammed with a Chinese folk orchestra — without losing track of their own musical roots. Such is the one-of-a-kind career of The Chieftains, six upholders of traditional Irish music.

When The Chieftains appear at Sunset Theater in Carmel at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 14, it will be but one stop in a two-month tour that "chief" Chieftain Paddy Moloney calls, "a murderous one, but we're looking forward to it."

Moloney's Dubliner brogue is authentic, his voice cheerful during a telephone interview from Beverly Hills — but one of 24 he must sustain that day. If touring six months of the year is indeed "quite a bit of a haul," the band's spokesman doesn't sound like it.

"Always, with every piece, variation of phrasing comes into it each night," Moloney says. "It's never the same. This keeps the whole band alive and very much enjoying ourselves. Just like in jazz, someone will take off and do something that sparks the others."

The Chieftains, whose name was inspired by Irish poet John Montague, made their first album in 1963. To most Americans, both the names and look of many of their instruments are exotic.

Paddy Moloney plays Uilleann pipes and tin whistle. Percussionist Kevin Conneff plays bodhran; Matt Malloy, flute; Derek Bell, Irish harp, timpan (dulcimer) and piano. Martin Fay and Sean Keane are the fiddlers.

The Chieftains won an Oscar for their contribution to the score of Barry Lyndon. The 1976 Stanley Kubrick feature marked their first venture into the world of film. In 1983 they won a Genie, the Canadian equivalent of an Oscar, for composition and performance of music in The Grey Fox, a film about the first Canadian train robber.

"I've just written a score for Ballad of the Irish Horse, to be screened March 6 on PBS," Moloney said. "It's quite magnificent. It was in fact written for full orchestra and Chieftains. We will play you a suite from it in Carmel."

The Chieftains continually build their repertoire, both through composing original works and adapting folk music they encounter during world travels.

A TOUR of the People's Republic of China in 1983 became, as Moloney remembers it, "one of the great highlights of The Chieftains' career."

"We were playing at the Albert Hall in London, and a group of Chinese enjoyed the concert so much, they invited us. It took about three years to get it all together."

Moloney maintained three stipulations for this special concert: "a recording unit, a television crew and also, for each concert, a Chinese folk orchestra available to play with us."

Irish folk music was sent ahead, which the Chinese players learned. "We did likewise with some Chinese tunes and we had a jam session. The closeness of the instruments was totally amazing. It's out on a new album, The Chieftains in China."

Members of the Sunset Theater audience

PLAYING both traditional Irish music and their most recent compositions in a Valentine's Day concert will be The Chieftains. The band comes to Sunset Theater at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 14. The theater is at San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. For ticket information, call 624-3996.

will note that The Chieftains brought a bit of China back with them. A Chinese musician will join them on stage and play the erhu.

"It's a two-string sort of miniature cello that sits on your knee," Moloney explained. "And we actually brought a Chinese gong." A Wisconsin music writer made note of the Chieftain composition Full of Joy: "The tune incorporated a distinctly Oriental feel to become a Sino-Celtic reel."

While musical innovation is a constant in the group's lengthy career, they've not forgotten the Irish reels, traditional ballads and ethereal harp compositions that brought them fame.

"We are, in fact, unique throughout the world in that we cover the full range of traditional Irish instruments. We can cover the whole range of rhythms and tunes."

The "chief" Chieftain also said the group tours about six months of the year.

"We always like to touch base to get back to our roots. Derek 'Ding Dong' Bell is from Belfast. We've a west of Ireland man, Matt Malloy. The rest are from Dublin. The whole of 32 counties of Ireland is magnificent. We play as much in the north of Ireland as in the south."

In the summer of 1982 The Chieftains opened for the Rolling Stones at Slane Castle in Dublin before a crowd of 80,000.

"They've been fans of ours for many, many years," Moloney said. "Jagger has been a great fan."

Kevin Conneff, the band's bodhran player, presented Stones' drummer Charlie Watts with a bodhran of his own. A jam session followed.

The Stones' gig seemed but a warmup compared to a concert before a crowd of 1,350,000 at Phoenix Park in Dublin. In attendance at that show was the reigning pontiff, John Paul II.

"It wasn't our gig — we were just the opening act. The pope was the headliner," Moloney quipped.

Following another concert in Rome, Pope

John Paul spoke to the band members for a few minutes, and commented: "It must have been the music that got St. Patrick to Ireland in the fifth century."

The Chieftains remain a very lively blend of contemporary and traditional. Just ask the pope, Mick Jagger, or any of their other fans.

Reserved seating for The Chieftains' concert is available through the Sunset Center Director's Office, Eighth and San Carlos, Carmel, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tickets are $8 and $10. For details, call 624-3996.

Award-winning pianist to make West Coast debut

IN HER first West Coast performance, German pianist Babette Hierholzer will appear at Sunset Theater, Carmel, at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15. The concert is presented by the Carmel Music Society.

Hierholzer, who is a regular recitalist with the Salzburg Festival, made her first public performance at the age of 11 in the Philharmonic Hall, Berlin. She was a student at the Juilliard School of Music and also studied under Paul Badura-Skoda, Bruno Leonardo Gelber, Lili Kraus and Maria Tipo. Seven first places in the Steinway Competition and two first prizes in the National German Piano Contest have been awarded to her.

A high point in her career was her part in the recent film, Spring Symphony, about Clara and Robert Schumann, in which she doubled for Nastassia Kinski in all the piano scenes.

The program for the Carmel concert will include four sonatas by Scarlatti, D-minor, L. 413, C-major, L. 457, D-minor, L. 423, and D-minor, L. 422, the Variations in D-minor from the String Sextet, B-flat major, op. 18, by Brahms, Masques and L'isle joyeuse by Debussy and Carnaval, op. 9, by Schumann.

Tickets are available at Bartlett's Music, Carmel; Do Re Mi Music, The Barnyard, Carmel; Abinante Music, Monterey; Bookworks, Pacific Grove, or by calling the Carmel Music Society, 372-1226. Prices are $9, $10 and $11. Some student tickets are available free of charge upon request.

BABETTE HIERHOLZER, pianist, is a regular recitalist with the Salzburg Festival and made her first public performance at the age of 11.

Al Weber totes camera with a cause

By ANNE PAPINEAU

PICK UP the 1980 catalogue for the University of California Extension, and there is one instructor described as the man who "has probably taught more photographic workshops than any other person in the western hemisphere." Carmel Highlands lensman Al Weber isn't about to refute that.

"For a long time I was teaching 35 to 40 workshops a year," Weber said. "Now I do 20 a year. The more you do it, the better you get."

Al Weber is one of the grand old men of the stop bath and fix, in a part of the world that draws photographers like dust to negatives. From 1963 to 1981, he taught at the Yosemite photography workshops with his friend, the late Ansel Adams. This assignment he gave up only when his own art school at Victor, Colo., demanded increasing attention.

ARTS & LEISURE

He continues to lead a "red-eye special" to the Lonesome Triangle of the Mojave Desert, where he coaches UC Extension students to develop their own interpretation of stationary sand dunes.

Structures of historical interest, from South County packing sheds to peninsula "painted ladies," gain notice and an occasional wrecking ball reprieve thanks to Weber's roving lens.

He documents Native American rock art, some of it local, most of it endangered by man and the elements. "It's kind of like hunting mushrooms," Weber said. "You do it and don't tell people about it."

Starting this week, Weber will lead the first Victor School photography workshops based in his own backyard, the Monterey Peninsula.

"I started Victor School in 1977, in an old brick schoolhouse," Weber said of the Colorado school. "But at 10,000 feet, it's a very short season there. There's still snow on GETTING DOWN TO THE BUSINESS OF LUNCH...

Spyglass at La Playa now offers a quick, yet elegant alternative. Instead of looking for that illusive parking spot in Carmel, you can be looking over the exciting menu in the Spyglass Lounge, while a valet parks your car.

The Spyglass Lounge presents a superb New York Steak Sandwich as the highlight of its appetizer, soup, salad & sandwich menu.

If more formal dining is your lunchtime pleasure, step into the lovely Spyglass Dining Room, where you will be treated to a complete luncheon menu.

For larger parties, your gracious hosts will be happy to reserve the Fireside or Garden Rooms for those lengthy lunchtime meetings.

Whatever your lunchtime requirement, we wish to place ourselves at your service.

AT THE CHERRY FOUNDATION

BY JANE WILGRESS

Jeanne Cherry's notebooks

SOME OF Jeanne Cherry's notebooks, which have providentially survived here, make fascinating reading.

One book, labeled "a fairly comprehensive account of Carl Cherry Foundation — building projects, people, paintings, ideas, ideals..." opens in 1948 with a quote with no origin given: "We live among the ruins of the original world," followed by Jeanne's comment in parentheses "(Nature was once Paradise-Eden...the fall turned Nature into dog eat dog.)"

The next page is dated April 1948: "Project 1 which has to do with pictures and this house which we conclude must hold the pictures: 1) the pictures are here shown to please the eye, the heart and the mind of the beholder; 2) Criticism is not wanted — appreciation is not wanted; 3) Out of what you see you make your own symbols — they are neither new nor old...the translation of these words these colors these forms depends on each individual reaction and response. They are half a sentence — you finish it."

There follow pages of quite practical planning for the remodeling of the house to create something like a center, to include "a room dedicated to crafts of whatever kind — a moveable feast." A July entry assesses what has been accomplished: "kitchen organized...safe bought and paid for...contractor agreed upon..."

In January 1949 Jeanne noted again what had been done: "The essentials of comfort are finished...niceties of decoration still untouched...painting shop not touched...only one carpenter left...bookcases etc...in process..."

In 1950 Jeanne recorded "Henry Kersh questioned us as to what was the Foundation function — answer: Love is its source and reason." (Kersh was a young dancer whom the Cherry Foundation sponsored in performances at the Forest Theater and at the Carmel Art Association.)

I give one final quote for this week from this rich material — an entry dated September 1950: "Report off the records — many illusions have been blown to bits in the Cherry Foundation — the greatest mistake in past six months was impracticability in ideas. The other great fact that stands out is the difficulty of living together in peace: without peace, nothing can be done." This is followed by an emphatic "THAT SAYS ALL" in Jeanne's large and very free calligraphy!

Free glee concert planned

Music from Renaissance to modern will be sung by the Washington and Lee University Glee Club during a free concert at the Santa Catalina School Performing Arts Center. The 30-man group will appear at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 21.

"I DON'T guess you should have a love affair with a pile of bricks," said Carmel Highlands photographer Al Weber of Victor School, the arts institution he started in Colorado. This leader of multiple workshops will bring some Victor School classes to the Monterey Peninsula for the first time this year.

Field workshops will take place not far from his home since 1955. (Photograph by Jerry Uelsmann.)

He documents local times and places

the building in June, and we get our first new snow in August. We really have to fly low."

While the original Victor School will continue to offer a variety of workshops this year, Weber has scheduled four Victor courses locally. The themes are "The Carmel Coast to Big Sur," "E-6 and Cibachrome," "The Zone System" and "Developing a Portfolio."

IF THE COURSE is taught by Al Weber, don't plan on spending the afternoon "looking for Edward Weston's tripod marks" at Point Lobos. Instead, this instructor insists he tries to coax students to develop their own eye and style.

"It's almost totally on a technical level. I don't feel as a teacher I have a right to intrude on students' perception. I'm interested in the business of challenging people to identify themselves."

Weber's photographic identity stretches back to college, where he received an A.A. degree in that field. A Denver native, Weber earned a B.A. in education from the University of Denver. In 1955 he visited family on the Monterey Peninsula and decided to stay.

"In the middle 1950s there weren't six photographers in the area," Weber recalled. "You didn't need a lot of equipment because you'd share it. A nice apartment in Carmel Woods cost $65 a month — with fireplace and patio."

Weber found work freelancing for local publications, including the Monterey newspaper. He was eventually befriended by Steve Crouch, who later won praise for his color images in the book, Steinbeck Country.

"I got a cutline in the paper one day and Steve called me up. We started doing weddings together. He was the wedding photographer in the area."

Toting 4x5 Buch Pressman and Linhoff cameras with 10-pound battery packs for each flash unit, Weber and Crouch would attend a flurry of Carmel weddings during the weekend.

"There was always confusion," Weber recalled. "If somebody called and you were busy you'd take the job anyway. We'd split the weddings and receptions. We used to charge $55 a dozen for photos."

"Then we kind of separated in direction. Steve wanted to be a Carmel photographer. I became more interested in commercial and architectural work."

To pursue his goal, Weber had to leave the peninsula. He opened a studio in San Francisco and specialized in environmental portrait work and book illustration, courting corporate clients.

"The funny thing is the glamour of that did not offset the beauty of the lifestyle on the peninsula," Weber maintained. He returned here on the weekends where he would photograph the land and occasionally join Eric Berne's poker games.

WELL-VERSED in the zone system, the approach to exposure and development of black and white that Ansel Adams evolved, Weber joined his Carmel Highlands neighbor as teacher at the Yosemite workshops.

"Steve (Crouch) and I were really contemporaries. Ansel didn't have any contemporaries," Weber said. "He was incredibly supportive of Victor School and wrote an almost embarrassing letter of recommendation. His willingness to participate in things — Friends of Photography, Friends of Big Sur — his years of service were incredible."

"He was a good friend. Virginia (Adams) still is," Weber noted. "She's very involved in Indian art. She'd joke with us and say: 'All you photographers around and I can't get anyone to photograph my baskets.' Well, I looked around and saw one or two and said I'd do it. It took about a week — she'd collected them since she was a little girl in Yosemite."

Weber has toured and continues to tour the country as a leading teacher of photography. But he also maintains a darkroom in his Highlands home, one that boasts "four color processors running almost constantly. I've always felt to teach you've got to work. Hardly a day goes by I don't give photography some time. I try to stay on top of the processes."

The focus of his instruction, he says, is to "teach photography as a personal pleasure. There was a burly man who was a plumber, and I finally got it out of him that he wanted to photograph wildflowers. It's all right if a 70-year-old woman wants to photograph killer whales."

One aspect of photographic education that disturbs Weber is the rise of technology and fine art print prices, which encourage many amateurs to think they can turn pro.

"They come to Carmel and see the galleries and the prices and think they can take photos that are better. They probably can. But they're not going to get as much money as Ansel Adams got."

"When we do a workshop, we really address that. We discuss where they will get a job. The industry keeps building more and more automatic equipment and a lot of people who used to hire a photographer go downtown and buy a camera. We're just not seeing many openings."

AN APPLICATION of photography Weber has developed in his own life is public service. "I feel my community obligation is fulfilled in this way. I think I'm more valuable if I lend my camera to a cause than to spend an afternoon behind a table in a booth."

For the Monterey County Historical Society, Weber is documenting local structures of interest that are threatened by the elements and man. For years he has captured Indian petroglyphs on film and often takes students to photograph the protected examples at the Naval Weapons Center in China Lake.

Weber was one of the photographers who assembled At Mono Lake, a 1982 book that served as a visual plea for water conservation.

"I feel a lot of people in the arts are very selfish. They don't think they have any obligations. A few years ago the Salinas Camera Club called and said they needed someone to judge their show. A number of Carmel photographers turned them down, said they were too busy. I was kind of ashamed of that attitude."

While he admitted to being "not 25 any more, I'm not interested in traveling that much," Weber's 1985 schedule will take him around the country to teach and learn. He reserves special fondness, however, for the workshops centered here.

"I'll show people the coast I've known for 30 years. We'll spend a lot of time on the Old Coast Road, stopping in the turnouts and on the beach. Two or three weeks after the workshop people are invited to the house. That's when I get very pressing. I challenge people whether they've achieved their goals or not."

AL WEBER:

"LEROY DUFUR was a painting contractor here — a Carmel Indian as we used to call them. At his daughter's wedding — it was around 1966 — they called the cops. I think somebody had jumped into a fountain. His widow is one of the better photographers on the Monterey Peninsula."

"ANSEL'S 1946-MODEL Cadillac was his main car for many years. It had a specially built rack. Some of his great photographs were taken from this. It was a really big car. The picture was taken in 1972 when Ansel donated the car to be auctioned off for the benefit of Friends of Photography."

An Album

"WE USED To have shows in the community room at the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. Sculptor Alexander Weygers is a Dutch engineer by training. He's known in San Francisco as the Michelangelo of Carmel Valley. He still lives in the Valley in a home that is all built out of trash and it's gorgeous."

"IN 1970 the City of Seaside won an American Institute of Architects Award as the city that had done the most to improve itself. They hired me to do a series on Seaside — before and after. I probably have 20 photos of this kid sitting on a concrete slab over a 60-day period. Any time you went by in the day he'd be sitting there. If I tried to talk to him there'd just be no talking. The city turned some of these photos over to the health department and they called on people. Later I went by and checked. He was never there again."

"THAT'S HANK Ketcham on the left with Arch Garner, a local painter and sculptor and a kind of business manager to Hank. Hank had an incredible adobe ranch at the end of Robles del Rio in Carmel Valley. This was taken there in 1957."

ON STAGE

A Lesson from Aloes

The Monterey Peninsula College Drama Department presents the apartheid drama, A Lesson from Aloes, weekends at the York School Theatre.

Winner of the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award as best play, A Lesson from Aloes details 1963 South Africa caught in the grip of a police state.

The cast includes South African native Rosamond Goodrich Zanides and Flip Baldwin. The play is directed by Nick Zanides. Curtain is at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 17. The theater is on Highway 68. Admission is $5. Tickets: 372-2475.

Monterey leagues register teams

The Monterey Parks and Recreation Department is now accepting registration for assorted slow pitch softball and baseball leagues.

Most games will be played on Saturdays. Programs are open to entrants 16 and older. For additional information about the following leagues, call 646-3866.

Women's Summer Socko (Slow Pitch) League: teams will play a single-round with all teams making the playoff with an upper and lower league playoff.

The team at bat must furnish their own pitcher to pitch to their own batter. No metal cleats are allowed. Team entry deadline is May 10. Fee: $130 per team.

Summer Socko League (Slow Pitch): There will be 12

team divisions with two "A" League Divisions and three "B" League Divisions. Every team will play one practice game to determine division placement. The four top teams in their own division with the best win-loss record will play off for the league championship in a best two-out-of-three game playoff. Only the first 60 teams will be accepted for league play. Fee: $135 per team.

Co-ed Softball League (Slow Pitch): Teams will be divided into "A" and "B" leagues with one practice game played to determine team level. Teams must field an equal number of men and women or more women in order to play a game. Only 12 teams will be accepted for league play. Fee: $215 per team.

Pee Wee Baseball League (Instructional) Boys/Girls: This recreational baseball program is for boys and girls ages six through eight who wish to play in a non-competitive league. A baseball clinic will be conducted prior to the beginning of league play. For the safety of youngsters, a cloth-covered baseball is used.

Every boy and girl who registers will be placed on a team. T-shirts and baseball caps will be provided. Balls, bats and protective headgear will be furnished. Must furnish own glove. Session runs Saturdays, April 13 through June 29. Fee: $8 Monterey residents; $10 non-Monterey residents.

STAFF FROM the Monterey Institute for Research in Astronomy (MIRA) will lead an astronomy intern program. MIRA recently completed construction of observing facilities at Chews Ridge. For internship information, call 375-3220.

Observatory begins intern program

An astronomy intern program has been established by the Monterey Institute for Research in Astronomy.

This professional observatory has recently completed construction of its observing facilities at Chews Ridge.

The MIRA staff will teach a one-semester course at Monterey Peninsula College. Classes are scheduled on Tuesday and Thursday evenings beginning Feb. 26.

In addition to being a general survey of astronomy, the course features topics particularly relevant to research studies at the observatory. The class is designed to meet the needs of future MIRA interns.

MIRA will prepare interns to assist in such activities as the Halley's Comet Task Force, daytime tours, visitors' nights, educational outreach to elementary school groups and research observations.

There are no course prerequisites.

For more information about MIRA and the Astronomy Intern Program, call 375-3220.

MUSIC CORNER

BY JO ANN LA TORRA

An evening of delights

SCHUBERT'S popular Octet was the highlight of the Feb. 9 all-Austrian concert by the Vienna Octet, under the auspices of the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula. The Viennese musicians did full justice to the Viennese composer with their sensitive presentation.

Overall, Schubert was not at his most effective in large forms. His facile melodic gift often interfered, and structure would give way to a wandering, episodic style. The Octet is not entirely free from that, but it is still effective, partly because the movements are not overly long and partly because the piece is on the light side. (Yes, a piece that lasts nearly an hour can be light, but it is not common.)

One occasionally sees this piece conducted, but it is much better when it is done as true chamber music, so that the players react to one another rather than to a conductor.

Each player has some opportunity to assert himself, although most of the solo playing goes to the first violin, cello and the winds (clarinet, French horn and bassoon). They were all excellent, but the horn player produced some especially elegant playing.

From where I sat, it appeared that he was playing a single horn, rather than the double horn favored by most American players. That could account for the lucidity of the sound.

The program opened with Hugo Wolf's Italian Serenade. Originally for string quartet, this arrangement was made for the Vienna Octet by a German composer. Wolf's output was almost totally vocal, so any instrumental music is something of a novelty.

It is a youthful work, and Wolf didn't have all the bugs out of his harmonic language yet: harmonies were sometimes beguiling, sometimes purposeless. But overall it is a charming piece.

Mozart's marvelous clarinet quintet rounded out the program. This was a limpid rather than a crisp Mozart, but nicely done on its own terms. The first violinist perhaps got a bit carried away with his planissimo, as he didn't always have the proper balance with the clarinet. And the minuet was awfully slow. This was not a slow dance.

There are music lovers, and potential music lovers, who are frightened by the label "chamber music," imagining something serious, intense and — ultimately — boring. This sort of program proves that chamber music does not have to be unduly serious, nor intense, to be thoroughly enjoyable. Boring — well, that largely depends on the performers.

A cranky, non-musical note: if the Chamber Music Society could produce eight matching chairs (or seven, since the bassist used a stool) here, couldn't four be found for a quartet?

The program for the Carmel Bach Festival has been announced, and it promises many musical delights in honor of the 300th birthdays of Sebastian Bach, Handel and Scarlatti, and the 400th birthday of Heinrich Schuetz.

Large Bach works include the B minor Mass, the Magnificat, The Art of the Fugue, the complete Brandenburg Concertos and several cantatas. A most unusual offering will be the Handel opera, Imeneo, a little-known work which had something less than a successful premiere in 1740. Written in England, it will be done in English.

BACKGAMMON

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

EARLY RESPONSE

In the diagrammed position, you, White, roll 4-3. How do you play it? Should you bring two men down from your midpoint, as if you were beginning the game?

This would be a reasonable idea if you had two men in Black's board to protect each other. In the actual position, it's an even more reasonable idea to start moving out of Black's home board before he can build a blockade to keep you in.

Therefore you plan to take part of your roll with the man on Black's 1-point and the rest of the roll by bringing only one man down from your midpoint. Should you move to Black's 4-point or to his 5-point?

If you move to his 5-point, you'll be under direct attack from the blot on his 11-point. He will hit you in his home board from his 8-point or from his 6-point if he gets a three or a one, and there's no advantage in giving him the chance to hit you with a six as well. Move only to his 4-point with a three and take the rest of the roll by moving from your midpoint to your 9-point.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1.00 plus a stamped, self-addressed No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

PUBLIC NOTICE

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
CITY COUNCIL
ORDINANCE NO. 85-7

AN ORDINANCE DESIGNATING A SPECIFIC PLAN FOR THE PROPERTY KNOWN AS THE GAMBLE ESTATE LOCATED EAST OF LINCOLN STREET, SOUTH OF 13TH AVENUE, WEST OF DOLORES STREET AND NORTH OF SANTA LUCIA AVENUE (BLOCK 144, SOUTH ONE HALF OF LOTS 15 AND 16; LOTS 17 THROUGH 28 AND THE NORTH ONE HALF OF LOTS 29 AND 30).

WHEREAS, the property known as the Gamble Estate is situated in the R-1 Land Use District within a neighborhood of predominantly larger building sites of approximately 6,500 square feet in area; and

WHEREAS, the low density and well-forested character of this neighborhood depends on large lot sizes for the preservation of open space and the neighborhood quality of life; and

WHEREAS, the Gamble Estate property was subdivided at 4,000 square foot rectangular lots; and

WHEREAS, if the property were developed to the density allowed by the existing subdivision, the result would destroy many significant trees on the site; would increase the traffic, noise and driveway access on neighboring streets; and would disrupt the neighborhood quality of life to the detriment of neighboring properties and residents; and

WHEREAS, a specific plan has been prepared to provide guidance and standards for development of residential construction on the property; and

WHEREAS, the proposed specific plan resubdivides the 12 existing lots into nine building sites in a manner that is sensitive to site features and the environment; and

WHEREAS, the average lot size would be 6,200 square feet and this size is consistent with the average lot sizes of neighborhood properties; and

WHEREAS, the specific plan would preserve and protect the existing residential structure on the property; and

WHEREAS, a negative declaration has been prepared for the specific plan, and has been found consistent with the California Environmental Quality Act and the provisions of Article 2a of Division 2 of Part X of the Municipal Code related to environmental review; and

WHEREAS, the specific plan has been reviewed by the planning commission and has been found consistent with the general plan and is a reasonable and effective means for implementing the goals, objectives and policies of the general plan; and

WHEREAS, two public hearings have been held on the specific plan and changes have been made to the plan in response to public comment; and

WHEREAS, the city council has found the specific plan to be consistent with the general plan and a reasonable and effective means for implementing the goals, objectives and policies of the general plan;

NOW THEREFORE, the city council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea does ordain as follows:

Section One. PURPOSE. It is the purpose and intent of this ordinance to adopt a specific plan for the property described herein in conformance with Article 8 of Chapter 3 of Division 1 of Title 7 of the Government Code of the State of California.

Section Two. PROVISIONS OF THE SPECIFIC PLAN. The following sections shall be added to Article 6 of Division 1 of Part X of the Municipal Code.

1306.2.0 SPECIFIC PLAN FOR THE GAMBLE ESTATE. The provisions set forth in this specific plan shall apply only to the Gamble Estate defined as Block 144, the south one-half of lots 15 and 16, lots 17 through 28 and the north one-half of lots 29 and 30.

1306.2.1 If an issue or condition occurs that is not sufficiently addressed by the specific plan, those regulations of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea Municipal Code that are most applicable to the issue or condition shall apply.

1306.2.2 The specific plan area shall be resubdivided into nine lots generally in accordance with Figure 1. A complete subdivision map showing all nine parcels and meeting the standards of such maps as specified in the Subdivision Map Act of the State of California shall be filed with the County of Monterey recorder.

The size of the nine lots contained within the specific plan area shall be as follows:

Lot 1 — 5,400	Lot 6 — 6,600
Lot 2 — 4,950	Lot 7 — 6,050
Lot 3 — 7,650	Lot 8 — 7,000
Lot 4 — 4,250	Lot 9 — 8,100
Lot 5 — 6,000

No further subdivision of the specific plan area shall be permitted if that subdivision would result in additional building sites. Lot line adjustments shall be reviewed and approved in the manner set forth in Division 8 of the Municipal Code.

1306.2.3 The existing residential structure on lot 3 shall be preserved with the exception that demolition of the south dining room wing and removal of other exterior walls is authorized. Any remodeling that would modify the exterior appearance of the structure shall be subject to review and approval of the Design Review Board in accordance with Article 2 of the Municipal Code.

1306.2.4 No tree as determined by the city forester to be significant as noted on Figure 2 shall be removed without approval of a landscaping plan by the city forestry commission. The landscaping plan shall include: a) reasons why removal of the significant trees is necessary; b) a plot plan of equivalent specimen trees and other plantings; c) a species list of the type and size of all plant material; and d) demonstration of how the landscape plan will enhance the natural conditions on the site.

1306.2.5 Development regulations for each lot shall be as follows: (a) The maximum height of any structure shall not exceed 24 feet from finished or natural grade, whichever is more restrictive. No structure shall exceed 15 feet from the rear property line.

(b) Site coverage as defined in Section 1310.16 of the Municipal Code shall be limited to the following for each parcel:

Lot 1 — 30%	Lot 6 — 30%
Lot 2 — 35%	Lot 7 — 30%
Lot 3 — 30%	Lot 8 — 25%
Lot 4 — 35%	Lot 9 — 25%
Lot 5 — 30%

*Note: site coverage for Lot 5 may be increased to 35% if the second floor coverage is limited to 50% or less of first floor coverage.

(c) The side yard setbacks shall be determined by the location of residential structures. A minimum of 12 feet shall separate residential structures and six feet between accessory structures.

(d) The front yard setback shall be a minimum of 15 feet in depth.

(e) The rear yard setback shall be a minimum of three feet.

1306.2.6 Construction of any new structure shall require approval of the Design Review Board. Review of Lots 1 and 2 and Lots 4 and 5 shall be conducted concurrently. In considering such applications, the Design Review Board shall address the following:

(a) Consistency of the proposed construction with the goals, objectives and provisions of the specific plan.

(b) Preservation of vegetation and significant trees.

(c) Preservation of the secluded view and vegetation screening the proposed structures as seen from the public street.

(d) Compatibility of the site plan with the natural site conditions and surrounding structures.

(e) Impacts on the solar access and privacy of adjoining properties.

(f) Minimal driveway access, distance between driveways, widths of driveways and driveway paving materials.

1306.2.7 Exceptions to the requirements specified in Sections 1306.2.2 through 1306.2.6 may only be approved when the Design Review Board finds that the exception better meets the objectives of the specific plan.

1306.2.8 The owner of each lot is entitled to a separate driveway from that lot to the adjoining street, but opportunities for combined driveways between lots and limiting driveway access shall be explored. Driveways shall be eight feet wide wherever possible, but shall in no case exceed 10 feet. The natural berm along Lincoln Street between the pavement edge and property can be disturbed only to the extent required for limited driveway access.

1306.2.9 Permitted uses on the site shall be as identified in Section 1310.01 of the Municipal Code. Guest houses may be authorized by the Board of Adjustments for lots 5 through 9. Except as otherwise specified in this specific plan, all the provisions of Sections 1310.4 through 1310.21 shall apply to the specific plan area.

Section Three. VIOLATIONS. Any person, firm or corporation, whether as principal or agent, employee or otherwise, violating or causing or permitting the violation of the provisions of this ordinance is guilty of an infraction. Any part of any building erected contrary to the provisions of this ordinance is hereby declared to be unlawful and a public nuisance and the city attorney shall, upon order of the city council, immediately commence action for the abatement or removal thereof.

Should any person, firm or corporation violate the terms of this ordinance and any action is authorized by the city council or the city attorney, or is in fact filed for said violations, no other actions shall be taken on any application filed by or on behalf of said person, firm or corporation, until the litigation has been resolved.

Section Four. SEVERABILITY. If any part of this ordinance is found unenforceable, such finding shall not affect the enforceability of any other part.

Section Five. EFFECTIVE DATE. This ordinance shall take effect 30 days after final adoption of this ordinance.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA this 5th day of February, 1985, by the following roll call vote:

AYES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: Arnold, Maradel, Stephenson, Wright, Townsend.

NOES: COUNCIL MEMBERS: None.

General Huey-Jun Hu shows paintings at city gallery

To honor the Year of the Ox on the Chinese calendar, General Huey-Jun Hu is the featured artist for February in the Seaside City Hall Gallery. Gen. Hu's Chinese paintings will be on view until Feb. 28 and the public is invited to view them during the regular office hours, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Admission is free.

Gen. Hu, also known as Cho-Jen Hu, is a native of Shui-chin, Kiangsi Province, China. He graduated from the Central Police Academy and received special training at various institutes. He is very active in the artistic arena. Because of his penchant for the arts, he requested retirement from the military service. As secretary-general of the Chinese Fine Arts Association, Gen. Hu is now promoting art education and activities in Taiwan and throughout this country.

Before age 20, Gen. Hu already was honored with one-man shows in Chekiang and Kiangsi provinces. After moving to Taiwan, he frequently exhibited his works in local and international art shows. In 1977 he was invited to Japan, Singapore, the United States and other countries to present one-man shows in many cities. During his trip to America, he was requested to demonstrate his painting techniques on a TV program and was awarded a special prize from the Los Angeles City Council. Recently he was invited to display many of his works at the exhibition jointly held by Chinese and Japanese artists, while lecturing in Tokyo.

He is presently residing in South San Francisco with his son's family. However, he always finds time to practice his calligraphy and painting. His specialties are landscapes, birds and flowers, and his "boneless" plum painting is noted for its depth and color. The gallery is at 440 Harcourt Ave., Seaside.

streets, will be featured at Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel. An opening reception is planned from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 16. The galleries are on Sixth Avenue at Mission.

Born in France in 1921, de Gallard studied art in Paris with Bernard Buffet, Andre Minaux and others, and joined the group of the artist Lorjou. A winner of many awards, de Gallard exhibits at such Parisian salons as the Salon de Mai and the Salon d'Automne of the Louvre.

His paintings have been acquired by the government of France, the city of Paris, the Museum of Modern Art in Paris, the Museum of Poitiers and the Museum of Djakarta.

The artist's oils are noted for a strong linear design. Earthy brown tones dominate the canvases. De Gallard maintains his home and studio in France and when he is unable to go out, his studio and wine cellar become subjects of paintings.

Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served at the Saturday reception. For more information, call the Zantman Art Galleries at 624-8314.

Underwater images by local zoologist shown

UNDERWATER color photographs by Steven Webster, director of education at the Monterey Bay Aquarium, are featured in The Old Coast House Gallery, 898 Wave St., Monterey.

Webster is the author of a divers' field guide, Caribbean Reef Invertebrates. He began diving and taking underwater photographs 25 years ago. Webster's collection includes images from the Sea of Cortez, Hawaii, Western Samoa and the Caribbean.

He was trained as an invertebrate zoologist and occasionally captures a fish on film through mistake, not design.

The zoologist has resided in Pacific Grove since 1977 when he moved here as coordinator of the then-embryonic Monterey Bay Aquarium project. Several of his images illustrate aquarium exhibits and his voice is featured in the This is Monterey Bay multimedia show and in the marine mammals locomotion film exhibit.

Webster uses a Nikon FM camera in a Tussey underwater housing or a Nikonos underwater camera. An underwater strobe is used to add warm color at a depth where there is little or no red light.

This exhibit marks the first time Webster's work has been presented in a gallery setting.

He is a member of the Monterey Bay chapter of the American Cetacean Society and is a past president of the Lyceum and current member of the York School Board of Trustees.

The Old Coast House is just above the aquarium. For more information, call 372-0442.

Area groups consolidate to display fiber arts

Representatives of eight Monterey Peninsula art organizations are coordinating their efforts to display fiber arts and crafts throughout March and April, Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art Director Thomas J. Logan has announced.

The various exhibitions, timed to coincide in part with the National Surface Design Conference at the Asilomar Conference Center in Pacific Grove March 19-22, will take place in the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, The Colton Hall Museum, the Pacific Grove Art Center, the Pacific Grove Natural History Museum, Sunset Center in Carmel and the Harvey-Baker House in Salinas.

Efforts to coordinate the exhibitions began last year when representatives of the Surface Design Association talked with several local museum and gallery representatives about the Surface Design Conference, said Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art Assistant Curator/Registrar Rick Deragon. Museum representatives accepted the suggestion for a national juried fiber competitive.

"There is a revived interest in fabric as an art form; we saw the prospect of hosting a national juried show as formidable — but no less exciting — because of the fascinating things done in 'fiber as art,'" Deragon explained.

Other local gallery representatives planned their own fiber-related activities, but "it was only recently that the museum brought everyone together to coordinate the exhibition information," he continued.

The time required to coordinate a series of events, he added, means that much of the activity remains behind the scenes.

"Because of all the coordinating, events such as this one will happen only every one or two years," he explained, adding "I hope this is just the beginning of an ongoing cooperation with all these institutions."

That coordination, Deragon said, "affords an opportunity to explore exhibition themes in depth. This (coordinated series of exhibitions) has historical garments, ethnological textiles, and 'fiber as art,' and it's kind of exciting."

"It's fiber explored in depth because of the cooperation."

WHAT'S PLAYING AT THE MOVIES

Beverly Hills Cop: Eddie Murphy portrays a Detroit street cop whose investigation of a murder takes him to Beverly Hills. Directed by Martin (Going in Style) Brest. Rated R. At the Regency Theatre. 375-6696.

The Falcon and the Snowman: Fateful friendship, ambiguous alliances, drug-running and espionage are the stuff of this John Schlesinger film, based on Robert Lindsey's non-fiction work. Stars Timothy Hutton, Sean Penn, Richard Dysart, Pat Hingle and Lori Singer. Rated R. At the Hill Theatre. 375-2800.

Fantasia: Choreographed mushrooms, balletic hippos and a satanic presence inspired by Bela Lugosi populate this innovative animated release from the Disney studios. Rated G. At the Cinema 70. 373-4777.

The Gods Must Be Crazy: Coke bottle prompts strife among African bushmen when the chief, Xi, decides to run with it to the edge of the earth and throw it away. There he encounters "civilized" characters, and the laughter increases. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Heaven Help Us: A Catholic boys' high school in 1960s Brooklyn provides the setting for this comedy that features Donald Sutherland, John Heart and William Shatner as faculty members. Rated R. Ends Feb. 14 at the Hill Theatre. 375-2800.

The Killing Fields: Drama based on the true story of a New York Times reporter rescued from execution in Southeast Asia by a Cambodian journalist, himself brutally tortured by Khmer Rouge soldiers. Rated R. At the Crossroads Cinema. 624-2792.

Mean Season: Kurt Russell and Mariel Hemingway co-star. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Mischief: Mel Damski directed this 1950s-centered comedy about young love. Co-stars include Catherine Mary Stewart, Doug McKeon, Kelly Preston and Chris Nash. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Mrs. Soffel: Diane Keaton portrays a turn-of-the-century warden's wife who falls for a condemned man (Mel Gibson) and assists in his escape from the Alcatraz County Jail. Gillian (My Brilliant Career) Armstrong directs this traumatized tale. Rated PG-13. At the Golden Bough Theatre. 624-4044.

A Passage to India: E.M. Forster's 1924 novel set in British India is brought to the screen by David Lean. Cast includes Judy Davis, Victor Banerjee and Peggy Ashcroft. Rated PG. At the Carmel Village Theatre. 624-5341.

Places in the Heart: Edna Spalding (Sally Field) struggles to keep her family together despite enormous hardships in this 1930s-based drama. Rated PG. Ends Feb. 14 at the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: A send-up of remembered monster movies, with the added twist of music. "The Time Warp," "Over at the Frankenstein Place," and an audience that seems to know the lines better than the actors. A long-standing cult classic. Rated R. At the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Witness: Harrison Ford portrays John Book, a Philadelphia police captain, and encounters romance when he meets an Amish farmer's widow whose son accidentally witnessed a drug-related killing. Witness is directed by Australian Peter Weir, whose previous credits include The Year of Living Dangerously and Gallipoli. Rated R. At the Valley Cinema. 624-5111.

Golf Course Homes

Prices Reduced Up To $140,000

Carmel Valley Ranch is located just 15 minutes from the restaurants and shops of Carmel by the Sea and only 20 minutes from Pebble Beach. Yet, where Carmel's scenic seaside areas are often shrouded in fog, Carmel Valley Ranch enjoys sunshine virtually all year long. Situated on 1750 private acres, CVR consists of the prestigious Carmel Valley Ranch Homes, a 12-court tennis club (including a sunken stadium court), two practice courts, a swimming pool and spa, a world class Pete Dye golf course with a 19,000 square-foot clubhouse and 1250 acres of scenic upland open space with riding and hiking trails.

The Ranch is bordered on its north-erly edge by the scenic, winding Carmel River.

Entirely private, access is through a security gate that is manned 24 hours a day.

Extraordinarily spacious, Carmel Valley Ranch Homes offer master bedroom suite with sitting area,

6.2 miles off Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road. Right on Robinson Road to security gate.

Almost every room has an expansive view of the tree-filled hillside area. See lots of your very own flora and fauna from the decks or from the lower level huge family entertainment room that has sit-down bar, game table, pool table, and satellite TV antenna plus a lovely powder room. The vast master suite completes the home — glass wall views, of course — and has a big, big tub, steam shower, twin basins and acres of closet space. Double garage, of course. Now only $499,500. 24000 Fairfield. Take Agujito to Pasco Venadis to Fairfield.

CARMEL HOME DELUXE. A brand-new Diane Stevenson design that features two large bedrooms — one with an ocean view over the trees — and two large bathrooms. Jacuzzi, twin basins, old-fashioned commodes, lovely tile treatment, and the wonderful Tower of Shower are features of the baths. Laundry. Large open-beam ceiling living room with skylights, acres of glass for that light and airy feeling. Dining room, fireplace, and kitchen with all the desired major appliances. Mexican tile floor throughout for ease of care. Parking structure, decks, balconies galore, stone patios, and plantings in place. All you could want for that "Carmel" feeling. $495,000. Lincoln St. between First and Second.

Sur Coast of California

BIG SUR Unexcelled View on Partington Ridge

Partington Ridge enjoys a special niche along the extraordinary Sur Coast. Its north/south alignment, coupled with protection from the prevailing northerly storms, provides a warm, sunny micro-climate. The history and people of Partington Ridge have included a fascinating mixture of homesteaders, artists, writers, scientists, musicians, archeologists and educators. The Nicolas Roosevelt Estate's 3+ acres is less than one mile up a surfaced road from California's first Scenic Highway.

The main structure, completed about 1940, with subsequent additions, is situated on the crest of Partington Ridge and surrounded by citrus orchard, gardens, stately trees and meadow at an altitude of about 800'. The utility situation is excellent. This rustic Big Sur home of about 2,000 sq. ft., includes a separate apartment, with kitchen; an addition to the original house. A completely separate guest house with large deck is an added asset to this exceptional property.

Pictured above is the elegant and spacious 30x18 living room, with fireplace and built in bookcases. Of paramount importance, are the views captured from the large windows at each end. The view northwesterly, shown in the photo below, across the Sur Coastline to Pfeiffer Point some seven miles distant, is matched in awesome beauty by the southwesterly outlook along the tumultuous shore.

Describing his experience on Partington Ridge, Henry Miller wrote, in "The Oranges of Hieronymus Bosch," "At dawn its majesty is almost painful to behold. That same prehistoric look. The look of always. Nature smiling at herself in the mirror of eternity." Price of this splendid property is $600,000; the estate sale is subject to court confirmation. Let our Coastal Division provide further details and arrange for your visit.

It has a loft which could be a third bedroom and is situated on a quiet cul-de-sac. $349,000.

FOREST SETTING IN COUNTRY CLUB

Spacious rooms and forest setting are just a couple of the extras this buy at 2979 Colton Road has to offer. With 2 bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths, two decks and extra large living room, this house is a short walk to the Dunes Course at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club. $280,000.

VIEW OF POINT LOBOS

Breathtaking views of Point Lobos and the ocean are yours for the taking from this great home on Santa Lucia, the first southeast of Lincoln. With 5 bedrooms and 3 baths and 2,050 square feet of living area this lovely Carmel home has a new roof. This is the first time this home has been offered and it won't last long at this price. $485,000.

GREAT LOCATION NEAR TOWN

The location is one of the best things this great Carmel home has to offer. It's situated on the south side of 10th, the second west of Dolores, a short walk to the Village and beach. The home has been completely refurbished and offers a mixture of modern with the Carmel charm of wood and open beam ceilings. The third bedroom is a converted garage that could easily be changed back. Extras include a large deck with hot tub, drip irrigation system and top notch landscaping. $295,000.

OCEAN VIEWS FROM DECK

Ocean views from the extra-large deck and the living room of this fine old Carmel home are just two of the points making it a great offer to the buyer who is willing to paint it and put in new carpet. It already has a new roof, new deck, new water main, water heater and in the past two years a soft water system and dishwasher have been added. There are 4 bedrooms, 2 baths and 2,000 square feet of living area. Located on the eastside of Casanova the seventh house south of 4th. $285,000.

Cotswold Cottage

Dating from Carmel's golden age of architecture, Cotswold Cottage is an authentic English Country Cottage. Every room has a bay window, dormer, or built-in typical of the era.

The nearly 1400 feet of living area includes a 2 story entry hall with winding stairway leading to the second floor, a large living room with bay window and built-in bookcases, ample dining room with china closet, two bedrooms, two baths, a cozy sewing room, and original kitchen.

This home is a decorator's dream — hardwood floors, heavy plaster interior walls, and detailing typical of the era. Outside, the home sits on two full corner lots and is surrounded by Carmel stone walks and patio plus lovely old paintings. A small basement and attached garage complete the picture. Some updating required.
